EVELYN WITNESS AGAINST HUSBAND

'THAW IS INSANE,'

---Dr. Baker of Matteawan

Jerome to Call the Wife of White's Slayer in Effort to Keep Him in Asylum—Prisoner Nervous as Doctors Testify.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 15.—"Harry K. Thaw is insane and a menace to public safety, and should not be at large," declared Dr. Amos T. Baker, Thaw's guardian at Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane, the first witness put on the stand by District Attorney Jerome to-day at the Supreme Court hearing of the young millionaire's suit to regain his liberty.

"What form of insanity is he suffering from?" asked Attorney Graham of Thaw's counsel.

"Paranoia," emphatically responded the physician.

As Baker made these startling statements Harry Thaw showed great excitement. He leaned forward in his chair, muttered unintelligibly and clenched his fists. Lawyer Peabody and Detective William Moon quieted him with difficulty.

HELPS THAW'S CASE.

Dr. Baker, who kept a diary of Thaw's remarks and conduct during his incarceration at Matteawan, made several statements which it was considered helped the young man's case materially.

He said that Thaw at one time sent for a piano-tuner to repair the asylum instrument, Thaw saying that he feared someone might think that he was losing his sense of harmony. He also said Thaw then sent for 200 hymn books for the inmates and later wanted to provide each with a lily for Easter.

JEROME TO CALL EVELYN.

Thaw also explained the story of the twenty tons of ice while in the London Hospital. Thaw told Baker that he asked for ice to cool the room, in the same manner that it is used in American hospitals. He said he may have asked for twenty tons or twenty pounds in an off hand way. Since Thaw's stay at that hospital the ice method of cooling rooms has been installed.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will be called by District Attorney Jerome as a witness against her husband if present plans are carried out. A member of Thaw's counsel was asked to-day if young Mrs. Thaw would testify for her husband.

"We shall not call Mrs. Thaw," he replied, "but it is probable Carlisle will be called as a witness by Mr. Jerome."

Dr. Baker was the first witness called by Jerome to-day.

"I made several examinations of Thaw and kept notes of what I observed," began Dr. Baker. "He detailed to me the hereditary traces of insanity in his family, and said that he had suffered from what was called St. Vitus dance."

The physician repeated Thaw's early history, which had to do with his school days.

Q.—What did he say about an attack of dementia in Monte Carlo? A.—He said that although physicians had testified that he was crazy he really was not.

Q.—Anything about the Devonshire nursing home in London? A.—Yes. He said that his experts at the trial had called his illness manitic depressive insanity, but it was only typhoid fever.

"Question Foolish," He Said.

Q.—What did he say about the room at the time? A.—He said the idea was foolish. What he had really done, he said, was to ask the physicians at the home to have a door cut in a partition so that he could have two rooms, one for himself and one in which to entertain his guests.

Q.—Did he say anything about ice being placed in the room? A.—It might have been twenty pounds or twenty tons, he couldn't say. He said that while it was

SLAIN GIRL'S FATHER HAUNTS DEATH SPOT

DOMINIC STAULA GRIMLY WAITS, BELIEVING MURDERER WILL RETURN.

"Each night since my little Louise was killed I have wandered to the spot in the meadows where the crime was committed. Something seems to tell me that the man who did it will return—and if he does I will find him, and then he will be certain of the punishment he deserves."

His eyes flashing with the light of vengeance and alternately welling with tears of grief, Dominic Staula, at his home in Dedham to-day, talked to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN about the mysterious slaying of the beautiful child while she was gathering violets last Monday evening near Mother Brook.

Staula is regarded as a good citizen, and a peaceful man, but wrought up as he has been because of the fearful fate that befell his beloved child it probably would not be well for the little man's assistant should he get into the father's clutches.

"She Was so Good—So Little."

"How can I talk about little Louise?" said the father. "She is gone—she is gone forever. And she was so good and so little, and so helpless. I cannot think that when I look around I will not see her attempting to hide from me in her playful manner.

"If I could find the man who did this awful thing I do not know what I should do to him. I feel sure that I could not keep my hands from his throat. I could not wait for the slow process of the law. Ever since the evening she went away to gather flowers and failed to come back, I have not been able to close my eyes in sleep only for a few minutes at a time. The picture of the little girl with her face covered with bruises for she was dear to my wife's arms comes back to me. It haunts me night and day.

Cries in Night for Slain Girl.

"My poor wife rouses through the night on her bed crying out in the darkness, 'Louise, Louise, come back to me.'

"Why was such a cruel thing done to my little girl? She had no enemy in the world —she could not have had. No one certainly would want to treat her in that awful way because of any childish action of hers that might have been displeasing.

"I had no enemies, I am certain. It could not have been because of me that this awful calamity has fallen upon my family. Last night in one of the short naps which I am able to get I dreamed that Louise was in the room calling to me as she used to do, 'Hello, papa; hello, papa,' and I woke. But she was not there, and I could sleep no more.

"I want justice. I demand justice. I am a law abiding citizen and I am entitled to the protection of the law. My family are entitled to protection from this fiendish act.

"If the man who killed my little girl is not punished—if he is not caught—I feel that something is wrong, and that such a person would not be allowed by the Good Being to go free after such an act.

No Little One Meets Him Now.

"I have worked in and about this town for five years. At noon and in the evening during the last few years, it was the custom of Louise to come and meet me and walk home with me to my dinner. Nearly always she had picked some flowers, if it were in the Summer time, which she would bring to me. Then she would tell me the games she played during the day.

"Now when I leave my work and look about me to see if my little girl has come to meet me, I feel lonely and have to sob alone. It is as though part of me had been taken away from me.

"Louise has been my companion since ever possible since she was big enough to walk. She was always happy. I never saw a child so fond of flowers. She always wanted them, she always sought for them and nothing seemed to give her so much delight. There was hardly a day in the year, even in the Winter, when she did not go and get a little flower in our house.

"Last Saturday, when she went to the meadows, with some of her playmates, she gathered a great bunch of wild flowers. She brought them home and we placed them in a glass of water. The glass was upon the table and on Monday night when my wife carried our little girl home dead the flowers, somewhat withered, were still in the glass on the table.

"When Louise lay in her casket the table with the flowers on them was placed by her side. We have the flowers yet and with them are some of the violets which were taken from her hand when she was found lying dead in the meadows.

Prays for Vengeance.

"My mind continually is on the man who slew her. I wonder who he is and where he is. Could I get a trace of him I would follow him until he were found even if it took the remainder of my life.

"Such sorrow and suffering as has come to us through this deed we have not deserved. We cannot understand it. We can only hope and pray that it will all be made right.

"As for Francesco, the man whom I pointed out in the street yesterday, I do not think he did it. I cannot think that he would have so harmed Louise."

Fred Nold was taken to the police station this afternoon in Dedham and questioned by the police who are investigation the killing of Louise Staula. He had told several stories regarding having seen Louise on Monday afternoon.

Louise and Celia di Vreso passed the Nold residence on their way to the meadows on Monday afternoon. After crossing the railroad Celia declined to accompany Louise any further, and, returning, joined Fred Nold at his swing. Celia said Fred went into the house and she returned to her home after having spent a few minutes there.

DEFEND WORK OF INDUSTRIAL STATE BOARD

Plan to Limit Commission to Two Years Rouses Stirring Protest.

That it would be far more profitable for the State to keep $60,000 in its strong box than to prolong the life and work of the Commission on Industrial Education for only two years, was the strong recommendation made to the House Committee on Ways and Means to-day by many friends of industrial education.

"Two years more" was recommended by the Committee on Education, whose chairman of which is Senator Clinton Q. Richmond of North Adams. Jealousy of the Industrial Education Commission on the part of the State Board of Education was said by Frederic P. Fish to be behind the "two year" recommendation of the Richmond committee. Senator Richmond is also a member of the State Board of Education.

The Richmond committee had two bills before it, the Thomas J. Gargan bill for a perpetual commission and the John L. Cole bill for a perpetual commission. The "two years" recommendation was a surprise to everybody.

Oppose Two-Year Plan.

With the exception of two men, one of them Senator Richmond and the other George H. Ellis, everybody who appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee to-day seemed to be agreed that the Commission on Industrial Education ought to have its life extended ten or fifteen years, at least.

The first suggestion to-day of perpetuating the commission came from Representative Norman H. White of Brookline, a member of Ways and Means. Then everybody fell in line.

Charles H. Morse of Cambridge, secretary and executive officer of the commission; Professor Paul H. Hanus, its chairman; Commissioner A. L. Plimpton, Robert Woods of the South End House, Warren G. Jewell of the State Grange, Arthur M. Lindell of the Boston Central Labor Union, James R. Chozier of the State Branch, American Federation of Labor; W. H. Tress of Lynn and Frederic P. Fish, former president of the American Bell Telephone Company, all opposed the two-year idea.

Filene Makes Plea.

"The life of this commission," Mr. Filene said, "should be extended. We want to know what is best for Massachusetts and we shall have to have adequate time to find out. Certainly from three to five years will not do it. The commission is laying the foundation. We have held four or five meetings a week, we have been all over the State, we have talked with every line of citizen.

"And yet, gentlemen, we have not succeeded up to this time in impressing on the people of Massachusetts that which the governments of practically all Europe have impressed upon their peoples, that industrial education, to be properly fostered, should be in the hands of a separate board.

"Experimental schools are to be established, the public of Massachusetts has got to be enlightened on a subject to which, unfortunately, it has yet given little thought.

"I do not believe that if the citizens of Massachusetts had time to give to the thought of industrial education and knew just what was being done abroad in this line, as we know it, that such a question would be before this board.

Separate Board Necessary.

"The time is coming quickly, however, when all America will take the example of the leading countries of Europe.

"A separate board will be necessary until, at least, the public understands. It would surprise this committee to know how great is the general confusion which exists as between 'manual training' and 'industrial education.'

DEPOSED MEN RENEW FIGHT

Declaring that Mayor Beck was actuated by political motives in removing them, Harry B. Hammond, Dennis A. O'Brien and James Walker, former license commissioners of Chelsea, who were removed from office last March after a hearing, today petitioned the Superior Court for a review of proceedings and Monday, May 18, was the date set for the hearing.

The commissioners were charged with not enforcing the liquor laws of that city.

2 MURDERERS PLEAD GUILTY

Two Italians charged with murder in the first degree pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree in the East Cambridge Court to-day and as the law provides will be sentenced to life imprisonment next Monday. District Attorney John J. Higgins accepted the pleas.

One of the prisoners was Guiseppe A. Zeccola, only twenty years of age, who shot and killed Charles Reed at Watertown on July 12, 1907, as the result of a quarrel over a cat. The other confessed murderer was Ferdinando Di Illinese of Somerville, who pleaded guilty to killing his wife Maria on September 14, 1907.

YALE MEN IN COURT IN POLICE INQUIRY

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 15.—The cases of the four Yale men charged with "breach of the peace" at the Fowler building fire, May 2, were called in Police Court to-day before Judge Matthewson. The case really will guide the various investigations of the charge that the police clubbed the young men unnecessarily. The most seriously injured, it now develops, was William T. Van Alstyne, who lies in the Yale Infirmary with a blood clot on the brain as the result of being clubbed.

SALARY GRAB BILL KILLED BY SENATE

The Senate to-day killed, by a unanimous vote, the bill to increase the salaries of members of the General Court.

Acting Governor Draper, a few days ago, refused the bill to increase Judges' salaries, and went on record as against such increases in a period of general financial depression.

The bill defeated to-day provided for an increase from $750 to $1,000 for Representatives and from $750 to $1,500 for Senators. The Senate President and House Speaker receive twice the pay of a member.

HIBBARD BILL TO MERGE CITY WORK

A new bill to permit Mayor Hibbard to consolidate city departments will be presented to the Legislature next Tuesday. Representative Gracton D. Cushing to-day gave notice in the House that he will move to substitute this new bill for the adverse report of the Metropolitan Affairs Committee on the Mayor's previous bill.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Boston, May 15.—After a day's layoff which served to rest up sore arms and heal lacerated feelings the Red Sox were ready to make a stand against the Detroit champions this afternoon.

In spite of the fact that the Tigers have taken both games played here the Red Sox cannot figure the visitors a wonderful team, except in the matter of luck. It seems as though every error made by their opponents turns out to their advantage, while their own errors count for nothing. At the same time, credit must be given Jennings's crew for keeping a hustle on every minute of the game.

It was time for Uncle Cy Young to pitch again. Come what may Deacon McGuire does not intend to ask the veteran to pitch more than once in four days. While the old fellow is always ready to go in it is not to be expected that he can be worked as often as he used to work. Let him go in and pitch after than once in four days and he is just as effective as he ever was in his life. The two games he has lost should have both been winning games. His box work was all right, but the men behind him did not but well enough.

Jennings had Willetts, Donovan and Killian ready for the firing line. He figured the Red Sox as somewhat easy and was disposed to reserve "Wild Bill" for the series in New York. But when he learned that Young was likely to pitch for Boston he hesitated about keeping Donovan out of the final struggle here.

SENATE BARS KILEY PETITION

By a vote of 5 to 10, the Massachusetts Senate to-day refused to admit Daniel J. Kiley's petition for legislation to require the Commonwealth to purchase the Boston & Maine stock now held by the New Haven road. Senator Mitchell argued for the bill's admission. Senator Potter of Worcester, a member of the Railroad Committee, opposed it. Senator Vahey ventured the opinion that "the Merger is dead as a doornail, as no committee would dare report a pro-Merger bill now."

SIX-YEAR TERM FOR JEWEL THEFTS

NEW YORK, May 15.—J. Edward Boeck, accused of having swindled various jewelers out of more than $200,000 in gems, pleaded guilty to eight charges of grand larceny before Justice Goff to-day, and was sentenced to not less than six nor more than seven years in the penitentiary.

BOY ACCUSED OF FORGERY

Charles A. Hunter, eighteen years old, of No. 55 Corbett street, Mattapan, was held in $2,000 bail for the Grand Jury by Judge Wentworth in the Municipal Criminal Court to-day, charged with forging the name of G. F. Fitzgerald on a check for $200 on the Old Colony Trust Company. Asked in court for an explanation, the boy said:

"I was out of work and I wanted money. I wanted to start a book account."

Young Hunter appeared at the paying teller's window in the bank this morning and presented the check for payment. The teller was suspicious of the signature and had Hunter arrested. The boy told conflicting stories, but finally admitted, the police say, that he had signed the check himself.

"Asked Me Weekly to Wed," Negress Says of Harvard Professor

MISS MANLEY RESUMES STAND IN HER $25,000 SUIT AGAINST MARCOU.

Every seat in the Superior Civil Court room in East Cambridge was occupied today, when the $25,000 breach of promise suit of Miss Annie L. Manley, a Boston negress, against Professor Philippe Berkange Marcou, formerly of the chair of romance languages in Harvard, was called for its second day's hearing before Judge Daniel W. Bond.

Among the hundreds of intensely interested spectators were scores of Harvard University students, men well known in every walk of life in Cambridge, and many men widely known in the educational and literary world. The spectators craned their heads to hear every word of testimony.

When court opened Professor Marcou was not in the room, but his attorneys of the firm of Brandeis & Nutter were expecting him every moment, and it was said that he would be accompanied by several Harvard professors and instructors.

Seats All Taken Early.

Long before the court was called to order the seats were all taken, and the court officials were obliged to turn many eager, anxious curiosity seekers away.

When court opened Miss Manley was again called to the witness stand. She took the seat in the same black suit and sweep in picture hat she wore yesterday, and her courage had received no jolt that could be observed. She walked to the stand apparently oblivious of the stare from hundreds of eyes.

Cross-examination by the attorneys representing the former Harvard professor, which was begun yesterday afternoon, was resumed. It was especially gruelling, but at its most trying moments the woman never winced and exhibited unusual nerve.

Her relations with Solomon Davis were the subject of the opening part of the cross-examination.

During the examination Miss Manley declared that for four years, and once a week during all of that time, Professor Marcou had asked her to become his wife and that at each proposal she had accepted him.

In trying to determine her real associating with Davis, the counsel for Professor Marcou took up the incident in Saratoga, where she was arrested when a bonus payment was raided last Summer and when she had said that she was Solomon Davis's wife.

The Saratoga Incident.

During the cross-examination Miss Manley contradicted herself several times. In one instance she said:

"I just happened to choose that house which was raided as my sleeping place."

A moment later she admitted in a question that she went there because it was run by friends of Solomon Davis.

Again she testified that Davis had not arrived in Saratoga until the day after she got there, but she finally admitted that he was at the house when she got there.

Further questioning brought out the fact that Miss Manley had assumed the name of Davis because of the record she had made for herself under another name. She at first declared that she had got that record while under the name of Manley, and then corrected herself by declaring that she was Dora Rich at that time. Then she finally admitted that she was arrested under the name of Annie Manley of No. 46 Middlesex street, South End, Boston.

Davis a Regular Lodger.

She also admitted that Solomon Davis was th eonly regular lodger who took his meals at the Clarendon and Holyoke street houses. She said that Solomon Davis had a rear room on the first floor of the Holyoke street house, and that she also had a room in the rear on the same floor.

"Did you ever tell Professor Marcou about Solomon Davis?" was asked.

"No, I never did," said Miss Monley.

Asked later why she had never told Professor Marcou about Davis, she said:

"He knew about Davis."

She was then asked why she had told the jury once that she had never told the professor about Davis, and again that he knew about him being around the house. This caused a big wrangle between Judge Henry S. Dewey, counsel for Marcou, and Attorney McClelland of Brandeis & Nutter, the presiding judge finally ruling the question was allowed.

"Up to the time I was arrested in Saratoga I had no reason to know that Mr. Marcou knew that I was known as Solomon Davis's wife," said Miss Manley.

Paid Bills With Marcou's Money.

Judge Dewey strenuously object to this question being answered, but he was overruled by Judge Bond, who said that the stenographer might note that the plaintiff's attorney objected.

In answer to questions Miss Manley said:

"Up to the time of my arrest in Saratoga I never knew that Mr. Marcou knew anything about Solomon Davis. When running the lodging house in Boston I was known as Annie Davis. Solomon H. Davis lived in the house, but I never gave thought to any possible suspicion because of that fact.

"I told Mr. Marcou that the man living in the house did all of my outside work, such as run errands, pay the rent and different bills."

"Where did you get the money for this?"

"It was all paid out of the money Mr. Marcou gave me."

In answer to further questions, Miss Manley said:

"Davis paid his board every week, paying what he could afford. I have never had any financial arrangements or dealings with Davis since he left the house except one letter, in which he said he had sent me some money. This was a year ago. He was in Canada then. He came to Boston in July last year, but not to my house. He has called on me two or three times since then."

"Proposed Marriage Every Week."

Attorney McClelland then asked: "On how many occasions did Mr. Marcou, as nearly as you can tell, ask you to become his wife?"

"He asked me off and on for four years," said Miss Manley.

"How many times?" demanded the attorney.

"I don't know," was the witness's blunt reply.

"As nearly as you can remember?" persisted the attorney.

"Once a week for four years."

"Did you accept him each time?"

"Yes," said the plaintiff.

"Did you and he ever talk about the engagement in the presence of friends?"

"Yes," replied Miss Manley. "We talked about it before my sister Ella, who is now Mrs. Beatrice Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Boswell, Alpine Davis, my sister Harriet and my daughter Violet. My health was affected by the failure to have my wedding take place. I doctored myself and was also treated by Dr. Pike."

THAW IS INSANE, DECLARES DOCTO

but the custom in England at that time to cool rooms with ice, the method has since been adopted.

"Answering my queries about his use of tobacco, he told me that he smoked about ten cigarettes and three cigars each day from the age of eighteen," testified the witness. He declared that he used alcohol in moderation, but never to the extent of losing unable to know what he was doing.

"About his trial and the verdict of the jury he said that he knew that he never was insane and his lawyers were of the same opinion, but the plea of insanity was the only way to save him from conviction for murder in the first degree. That the testimony of a Dr. Brown, who said he treated him in Monte Carlo was entirely wrong; that Dr. Brown had never treated him.

Dr. Bailey who testified that he treated him on a train between Albany and New York, he had never seen, he said. He said that he had a nephew who passed under the name of Harry K. Thaw and believed it was this relative that Dr. Bailey might have treated.

Declaration a Boomerang.

This declaration, that the testimony at the last trial was wrong, has since worked as a boomerang for Thaw's case.

He said on February 2 he was thirty-seven years old. The day before he claimed he was thirty-eight. The witness continued that Edna Stanford White, he said [illegible] Stanford White, he said that the architect was one of a band of rich men engaged in ruining young girls; that Edna Goodrich and Evelyn Nesbit had told him how they had been ill-treated, and that when he went to Miss Helen Gould about it she referred him to Mrs. Strong, President Baldwin of the Long Island Railroad and Anthony Comstock.

"He asked me to allow him three drinks of whiskey a day, after assuring me that he wanted no favors while in the institution. I sent for a stimulant and he wanted to drink it all at once. I allowed but a small amount of the liquor."

Getting down to the night of the shooting, Dr. Baker declared that Thaw said: "I shot White in an impulse, the pistol went off when I saw him scowling at me."

According to the witness declined to answer further questions on the points of advice of counsel.

Mixed on Political Situation.

"He said that Roosevelt was President and Hughes Governor and that election day fell on Tuesday after the second Monday in October," the witness testified.

Thaw missed guessing the date Roosevelt took office by just four years. He said the President had been sworn in September 15, 1905. In regard to the date of his marriage Thaw was also doubtful. He believed it might have been April 4, 1905, but could not be certain.

"Thaw said that meeting White on the roof garden of the place in which she had been wronged was like coming to a precipice with an irresistible impulse to jump off," Dr. Baker said.

"There was White, and there was my wife and then the pistol went off."

The delusion that White and his friends were still persecuting Thaw prevailed even after he had been in Matteawan for a year, according to the witness.

"He told me that it was only part of the plot to keep him in custody for life to prevent him from exposing several men. He would not reveal the names on advice of counsel, he said."

What did he say about the testimony of Dr. Wells of the Devonshire Asylum Hospital, London? That in a great many instances it was entirely false and grossly exaggerated.

Jerome then sprung a story of Thaw ordering 200 chocolate eclairs one night of Feb. 25 and tried to show [illegible] had some connection with Thaw's testimony for fondness for eclairs. In this he failed because Baker had not heard that Mrs. [illegible] liked eclairs.

"There was to be a dance at the institution on February 25 and the eclairs were delivered in the morning," said the doctor. "I inquired of Thaw why he had sent them, and he explained that he was fond them distributed to the attendants, [illegible] the inmates.

"I explained that it was against the rules and the eclairs were not used."

"Should Not Be at Large."

"I asked Thaw about the published reports of his wife's conduct and he said he did not care what they said. He said he was pleased when I asked him about her reported action for an annulment. The papers are on the wrong track, but they are betting wisely; they are doing just what my lawyers want them to," Thaw told me about the published reports of the annulment proceedings.

He asked me to-day if babies corpus was begun if I believed I could induce Dr. Lamb, the superintendent, to publicly retract statements he had made about [illegible] (Thaw's) condition."

On April 6, Dr. William T. Russell, the State Board of Lunacy examined Thaw and Thaw complained of the nature of food. Three days later a piano tuner from Steinway's called at the asylum.

"Menace to Public."

"He said Thaw had sent for him to tune the piano. The next week he ordered 100 hymn books and asked me to allow him to furnish Easter lilies for the inmates for Easter Sunday, which request was refused.

"He insisted that he was insane but one-half minute before the shooting and for one-half minute immediately afterwards. He declined to submit to a physical examination on advice of counsel and on May 1 refused to be photographed for the same reason."

This ended Dr. Baker's direct story.

Before he was turned over for cross-examination Jerome asked him to express his opinion of Thaw's present condition.

"He is insane and a menace to public safety. He should not be at large," declared the physician.

Thaw Clenches Fists.

Thaw showed great excitement during the recital of the doctor's testimony. Leaning forward in his chair he stared at the witness, muttering and clenching his fists. Lawyer Peabody and Detective Will Moon talked with him and succeeded in quieting their client.

"What form of insanity is Harry Thaw suffering from?" asked Lawyer Graham.

"Paranoia," responded the physician.

Graham tried to show that Dr. Baker had declared to him that he had found no evidence of paranoia in examining Thaw, but the physician availed himself of a convenient lapse of memory.

"I don't remember," he said, in answer to the repeated questions.

Dr. Greame Hammond and Dr. W. Scott Tracy, alienists, arrived during the session. Thaw greeted each with a warm handshake and began to acquaint them with the testimony they had missed.

THE GOVERNMENT ORDERS TONS OF CANDY

Yesterday Six Truck Loads Containing Twenty Tons of Candy Were Seen on the Streets on the Way to the Dock for Shipment to the West.

The Navy Department has ordered another lot of 40,000 lbs. of high-grade chocolate bonbons for the Pacific Fleet, to be delivered in San Francisco before the ships sail for the East. Like former orders, these are Lowney's. During the Spanish War, when 100,000 United States soldiers were in the Philippines, the Lowney Company sent 42,000 lbs. a month of the finest chocolate candies for several consecutive months, in response to Government orders, and at that time large shipments have been repeatedly ordered for the warships, owing to a conviction on the part of the medical corps that chocolates lessen the desire for strong drink and are especially good for men in the tropics. Purity, flavor and keeping qualities are the three requirements. Every bonbon is wrapped in tin foil and then packed in airtight tin boxes with screw tops, to resist heat and salt air. Jack does not care for the pretty paper boxes landsmen know so well, but he likes the contents and orders in carload lots.

Last December a shipment of 15,000 lbs. went forward to the "Culgoa," the supply ship of the Pacific fleet. This was in addition to 10,000 lbs. that were already on board the separate ships in their various canteens, and was taken to prevent exhaustion of supply and consequent suffering to the men. This twelve and a half tons were all gone by the time the fleet reached San Francisco, and now the Government pays a compliment to Lowney's Chocolates by ordering twenty tons more for the voyage across the Pacific.

Other shipments are being packed for the armies in Cuba and the Philippines. Considering the extreme care of the military authorities in analyzing all goods bought for the army and navy, there is no room left for doubt as to the purity of Lowney's Bonbons. The Government waives the question of price in favor of the more important consideration of quality.

LOVE LETTERS TO NEGRESS IN MARCOU CASE

ensational Epistles Put in as Evidence f r Miss Manley in Breach of Promise Suit.

Letters introduced by counsel for Miss Manley, in her $25,000 breach of promise suit against P. B. Marcou, former Harvard professor, have proved one of the sensations of the trial now in progress at East Cambridge. They are declared to have been written by the professor of the negress during a period of some three years. Here they are:

"Will Send Money for Your Taxes."

No. 3 Boulevard Saint Michel, Jan. 6, '08.

Dear Old Lady:

I am still sick and confined mostly to my room, but expect to be better before long. I enclose a P. O. order, and will send another one to-morrow for your taxes. I am pretty low spirited and have no news. I hope you are well and happy. Yours as ever, PHIL.

"My Xmas Will Be Lonely, as Usual."

December 15.

Dear Old Lady:

I am not feeling well these days or I should have sent you P. O. order yesterday. Nothing but a cold. I shall soon be better; in better spirits. I wish your folks a Merry Xmas; mine will be lonely, as usual. Will write more at length next week. I hope to be well.

I enclose the usual P. O.

Your Old Man. PHIL.

"I've Done My Best to Make You Independent."

Paris le 3 Decembre, 1906.

Grand Hotel Terminus, Gare St. Lazare, Paris.

Dear Old Lady:—I am writing this in a restaurant because it is quite cold in Paris and my study does not heat well in cold days.

I got your letter a week ago telling me of the receipt of my last P. O. order and registered letter, but receipt for the registered letter has not turned up. If it shows again I shall ask the postoffice to investigate. I have to climb five pairs of flights to get to my room and the regular exercise has been very good for my heart which has not bothered me recently, and if you don't worry me any more I hope you may see me next Summer no worse than when I left you. You do not say how Ella is. I hope she is better and has left the hospital by this time.

As for the money for your taxes, I will do my best to send it to you in January, but can make no promises. I might as well not be here at all as not to have money enough to live comfortably and return the courtesies that are showered upon me. I hope you keep nice and warm and don't run around in your bare feet. If you take good care of yourself you won't have any rheumatism.

I have done my best to make you independent, and if you are worrying about anything it is now your own fault. You may depend upon my doing what I said.

I will write again in about a week and send another P. O. order. Giving my love to the folks. Your old man. PHIL.

"Lord Only Knows and He Won't Tell."

11 August, '04.

Dear Old Lady:

Your letter of Aug. 1st came this morning. I have still a bad sore throat and am staying here to take care of myself and not to have a good time.

Your undated and unaddressed circular is very poor. You want $200, but the Lord only knows what for and he won't tell me. When you have ruined your old man, I hope you will have him a cold potato and a rug to sleep on under the

"I Am Sorry for Your Sick Stomach."

Paris, August 4, 1904.

Hotel Foyer Restaurant.

Dear Old Lady—That was a very nice letter you wrote. If you were as nice as your letters, you would be too good for this world. We have been having 100 degrees in the saade, and the heat knocked me out for nearly two weeks. I had to have a doctor and stay in my room, but I am all right again now.

While I was sick I had long talks with you, and you always answered just as I wanted you to. But when I see you again next month I know you will be the same dear, old, obstinate, foolish girl I have always known.

I am sorry for your sick stomach and rheumatism, but I am not astonished. I have seen many old friends and had a beautiful time here; now I shall soon start on my travels and go for a few days to my native town.

I shall believe that you mean to meet me in New York when I see you on the wharf, September 18. Till then I shall think that you don't like your old man enough to give him that pleasure.

My address is still the same you have. I don't put it down again because there is no telling who may open this letter.

Good-by, old lady. Take care of yourself. Your old friend, PHIL.

Remember me to Ella.

"Will Call To-morrow Love to the Folks"

Boston, July 11, 1906, Essex.

Dear Old Lady—Here I am at last, safe and sound. Will call on you to-morrow, Thursday, at 3 o'clock. Love to the folks. PHIL.

"Knocked Out by Heat, See You Monday."

Cambridge, June 8, 1905.

Dear Old Lady—The heat has knocked me out, in a queer way, but am taking care of myself. Shall be all right in another day. Will come and see you Monday evening. Have no news yet. Very sorry to disappoint you to-night. Ever yours, PHIL.

"The Same Old Annie, Not Changed a Bit"

Boston, July 17, 1906.

Dear Old Lady—I only got back from the country to-day; have been running 'round all day and don't want to cross the city now in the face of a thunder storm. To-morrow I shall be moving into new quarters and I can't tell when I shall be through. So I will come and see you Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. It was a great pleasure to see you again; the same old Annie, not changed a bit.

Good-by till Thursday. PHIL.

Written from Exclusive Colonial Club.

Colonial Club, Cambridge.
Monday, Oct. 31, 1904.

Dear Old Lady—This is a very busy week with me. I am busy to-night and may be busy every night till election, will come and see you to-morrow, Tuesday, about 10 o'clock in the morning. Try and be awake. Ever your PHIL.

"Will See My Banker and Send Enclosure."

3 Boulevard St. Michel, March 18, 1906.

Dear Old Lady—Your last letter knows that you are in good spirits and growing stout, which is good news. As for the extra money you ask for, I will do what I can, but selling sick in town is an expensive business, so don't expect too much. I shall go and see my banker some day this week and then send you another letter with an enclosure. Love to all, from PHIL.

"Don't Worry Me if You Can Help It."

23 March, 1906.

Dear Old Lady—I enclose to-day your usual P. O. order. I will send you to-morrow another one for fifty dollars. That is all I can do. I am still weak. Must take care of myself.

Don't be anxious about me. I am all right, but don't worry me if you can help it. Love to Ella.

Your old man. PHIL.

Afraid to Go Out in Storm to Get Money.

Saturday, Feb. 17, 1906.

Dear Old Lady—Don't be angry. The weather is so bad that I am afraid to go out across the city to get to the bank, but Monday I shall go, rain or sunshine, and send you your P. O. order. I am pretty well, but have to be careful. Your old man. PHIL.

Remembers Ella and Aunt Fanny.

September 15, '05.

Dear Old Lady—At last I am settled. Here is my address, 3 Boulevard Saint Michel, Paris.

I hope you received the letter and enclosure I sent you a fortnight ago. I am well and happy. My friends are very good to me.

Write soon and tell me how you all are, especially Ella. Give her my love and my compliments to Aunt Fanny.

Is Carrie still with you? I hope so.

As ever, PHIL.

"Keep a Good Welcome For Your Old Man Phil."

15 June, '06.

Dear Old Lady—I enclose the last P. O. order. I shall travel now till I start for Boston. You may get some post cards, but no more letters. I shall be back about July 10. I am not sure of the date of leaving, as I have the choice between a good many steamers. Besides I have very serious reasons for not wanting you to meet me in New York. I will explain when I see you. Expect a telegram from me about July 10. Give my love to the folks. Keep a good welcome for your old man.

Missed Her at the Station and Wharf.

2 July, 01.

Dear Old Lady—Here I am, safe and sound, in town. I missed you at the station and at the wharf in New York, and supposed you changed your mind, taking a lady's privilege. I will see about sending you a valuable document next Monday and will write then at greater length. Ever your PHIL.

This is my address for the next month: No. 33 rue de Tournon, Paris, France.

"No More Money. Do Stop Sporting."

Boulevard Saniesnell, Paris.
24 March, 1906.

My Poor Old Lady—I had just sent you a short letter yesterday after the usual closure when I got your letter of March 12. I am very, very sorry for you. Give my best love to Ella. I still hope that she will be spared to us.

You ask me when I am coming back. My sickness has kept me from working in the library as I intended, and I must now make up for lost time.

I have a short trip to take to Germany, and I must go back to my native place for a week. All that will take time, and I don't expect to leave for America till the 20th of June.

Now as to money, I can't possibly send you more than $50 now, which I inclose. I will pay my best to send another fifty in ten days.

But please don't ask for any extra money. I have got to live, too, and I am not making any money here.

Don't be downhearted. Don't let me dread your letters as I would a visit to the dentist. I am a nervous person and if I am to do any work in this world, I must not have to be worrying about money all the time.

If you can live comfortably on what I send you, so do stop sporting.

Your old man. PHIL.

"No Sign of My Old Lady on the Wharf."

Paris, Saturday, September 2.

Dear Old Lady—I got here two days ago, after a very pleasant trip, though, as usual, there is no sign of my old lady on the wharf. I suppose you found it pleasant to get off to Saratoga.

I am hunting all over town for a room which I want and hope to have it before I am settled.

Give my love to Ella. Remember me to Carrie, Mrs. Halliday and Viola.

Good old man. PHIL.

I believe what I promised.

"Be a Good Old Lady And Let Me Have Quiet."

29 October, 1905.

Dear Old Lady—Yours of Oct. 19 just received. I have already sent you three P. O. orders, for which I hold the receipts. The last was sent Oct. 15 and you have received it before now. You may be sure I will do what I said I would, but don't ask for any more because I can't afford it. I am living very simply and economically and working at two books.

My health is pretty good, except that my heart troubles me a little. If you want to kill me you will keep on worrying as you do. Try, and believe that I stick to what I say.

When I get back on the 4th of November I will send you another P. O. order for the usual amount. That will make all your October and November money. The rent order I will send about November 24, so that you may get it by December first. Now be a good old lady and let me have my Winter in peace and quiet. I have worked hard enough to earn it.

P. S.—I don't write as cruelly as you do, but you may be sure that I often think of you and yours, and hope to find my old lady the same kind friend she was when I left her. Trust me and don't be extravagant, and all will be well. The only extravagance I have indulged in is hiring a piano. * * * I hope you will see that my playing has improved when I get back. Your old man. PHIL.

"Spring Is Coming; I'm All Right Now."

19 February, 1906.

Dear Old Lady—Spring is coming, the air is mild, and there are puffy willows in the streets. I shall soon be well. I inclose P. O. order and am sorry to be a few days late this time.

I am feeling much better. Give my love to Ella and my compliments to Mrs. Halliday.

I will write soon, more at length. Don't worry about me. I am all right, and when you see me again you will never know that I have been sick. Your old man. PHIL.

"Only One Letter; I Am Anxious About You."

Paris, October 17, boulevard St. Michael.

Dear Old Lady—I have had only one letter from you and am getting anxious about you all. Otherwise I am well and happy. Give my love to all the folks, especially to Ella.

I inclose P. O. order, the third I have sent.

Try and write often to your old man. PHIL.

On the back of this letter is written your nice letter of October 7. Just came this morning. Will try and send the money as you wish, but remember that the time of the steamer is uncertain.

"Be Good; Remember Your Old Man Phil."

Hotel Resfayo,
8 July, 1904.

Dear Old Lady—This is hoping you are having a good time and will write soon. I have seen a good many colored people, but have not seen anything of your friend as yet.

I sent two money orders the other day because the check understood five when I said a hundred. He nearly threw a fit when he found I wanted to send a hundred. Now try to be good, remember Your old man Phil.

Money order enclosed.

"Compliments to Violet; She Cut Me Dead."

Princeton, July 30.

Dead old lady—I am going into the country to stay for about a week. Will write and make an appointment as soon as I return.

My compliments to Mrs. Halliday and to Violet, though she cut me dead.

We Lead With Low Prices

From the very first day that we opened our store, 32 years ago, our watchword has been "value giving." And giving the most for your money, always a little ahead with the newest in good clothes, steadily gaining the confidence of the buying public, has made us grow bigger and bigger, until today we enjoy the enviable reputation of the greatest exclusive clothing house in New England. Low prices and good clothing did it—nothing else.

Boston's Greatest Sale of Men's Fine Blue Serge Suits, Actual Value $12.00, Our Price 7.50

No wonder this is a busy store. Nowhere else can you match our values. Buying suits by the thousand seems enormous, but the way they disappear is equally remarkable. Manufacturers are always giving us the first look, and using big quantities brings down the price to us and to you, too. Don't miss this great sale of Serge Suits, fast color, single and double breasted, worth $12, on sale today for $7.50.

Men's Highest Grade Hand-Tailored Suits, That Are Worth $18.00 and $20.00, for $15

This is not the store that tells you one thing and sells you another. We did not begin to advertise our special $15 suits until by comparison we found them to be equal to other stores' higher priced suits. It's because trade conditions bring them here under value that you save $3 to $5 on each suit.

Men's $12 Suits We Sell for $10

Look the city over and see if you can match these $10 suits under $12. We've looked about and know ours excel. Choice fancy cheviots, handsome worsteds, in grays, blues and steels. Any of these for $10.

Men's $22 Suits You Buy for $18

$18 is not the highest price you can spend, but it will buy as good a suit as any man needs to wear. These are not the ordinary kind but $4 under price. Every new shade, every new model at $18.

Men's $30 Suits Are Yours for $25

Here are examples of the very best clothes made in this country. No tailor can make better under $50. They are absolutely hand made throughout and $5 less than at other stores. The newest browns, tans, olives and mode shades—instead of $30 for $25.

AFTER GREAT FLIGHT AIR SHIP FALLS

Wright Brothers' Machine Is Wrecked on the End of Triumph.

BAD LEVER IS BLAMED

By William Hoster.

MANTEO, N. C., May 15.—On the eve of a great triumph, with sustained record of eight miles in the air just rolled off, the Wright brothers' aeroplane was wrecked on the beach at Kill Devil Hills.

Wilbur Wright, who was steering the machine at the time, escaped injury. The accident was caused by an unmanageable lever, which, instead of regulating the descent of the machine to the beach, sent it pitching forward to destruction.

The Wreck Was Instantly Screened from public view and to-day the pieces are being packed for shipment to the home of the inventors at Dayton, Ohio.

Details of the accident were refused by the Wright brothers. For the purpose of conducting their experiments the two men leased a broad strip of sloping barre two weeks ago and ever this they exercised rigorous supervision. Newspaper reporters and photographers were strictly forbidden to approach the machine, and the observations of the correspondents have accordingly been conducted from a hill half a mile away from the testing ground of the airship men.

On Endurance Test.

It was from this point that the last wonderful flight of the aeroplane was witnessed. Had the wreck not occurred the Wright brothers would have leaped into fame to-day as absolutely successful navigators of the air.

In the presence of half a dozen lifeguards and with the newspaper correspondents observing movements closely, they had first sent the machine around a circular course of two miles, under perfect control, in two minutes and forty seconds, and after a short rest had started the machine on its longer expected endurance run.

Shortly after that the aeroplane was once more got into condition and the throbbing of her engines echoed across the beach and the machine rose gracefully into the air, and at a height of twenty feet took a northeasterly course up the beach in the face of a strong wind breeze. He blind her floated a flock of gulls and crows that seemed at once amazed and jealous of this new thing.

Sailed Away Gracefully.

Reaching the hill that juts out on the beach the cruiser of air gradually lowered her nose and, sailing upward, passed easily over the thirty-foot summits and careened on down the beach until the three-mile limit was reached, when, with another twist of the lever, she deflected a graceful turn and began the journey back to the starting point.

With the same ease and grace she made the return run, impearing and disappearing as intervals as the sand hills intervened on the vision, encircled the three-mile course in a most circle once more, and was off again on her old tracks down across the sand dunes.

Down the home stretch between the sea and the sand hill something went wrong. The watchers heard a whirring of the machinery and then all was silence.

A lever that should have sent the machine upward had sent her in the other direction. The ship had been smashed to pieces.

LOCATE ACCOMPLICE IN DEATH FARM CASE

OFFICIALS EXPECT TO ARREST MRS. GUNNESS' AGENT.

LAPORTE, Ind., May 15.—The mysterious accomplice who helped Mrs. Belle Gunness lure victims to her "murder farm" has been traced by detectives, it was learned to-day, and his arrest is expected before night. He has been located in Warsaw, Ind.

The capture of this man, if effected to-day, will be the biggest stride that has been made toward clearing up the great Indiana mystery. The police declare he is the "agent" who was sent out by Mrs. Gunness to approach susceptible strangers and tell them of a charming widow and vast farm lands that could be had for the asking.

It was further been established to the satisfaction of the police that this is the man who escaped with Mrs. Gunness in an automobile on the night that the "house of horror" was destroyed by fire.

An auto carrying a man and a woman who answers the description of the arch murderess was seen speeding through Hobart on the morning after the fire. Deputy Sheriff Gill decoyed the machine was running at a fearful rate and that it came into Hobart from the direction of Laporte. He is confident that the woman in the machine was Mrs. Gunness.

In fact, there is little doubt now in the minds of the citizens of Laporte that Mrs. Gunness escaped and lives a little longer that the three children who perished in the flames were not her own, but were adopted by her as a part of her cunning scheme to make herself appear as a respectable well-to-do widow who would make a desirable wife.

Believe Woman Hiding.

All Laporte is inclined to believe that this man with whom she fled is one of her mysterious conspirators or confederates, and that she is now probably in hiding and waiting her chance to sail for Europe.

New light was thrown on the Laporte case with the return of Emil Greenway, whom State Attorney Smith has been seeking since fire destroyed the Gunness home. His story practically determines the date on which the woman murdered her adopted daughter, cut her body into pieces and then buried it beneath the old mistress where it was found.

"I worked for Mrs. Gunness from July to the second week of October, 1906," he said to-day. "I met Miss Olsen and became fine friends. We were companions in misfortune. I was constantly abused by Mrs. Gunness for my work on the outside of the farm, and Miss Olsen came in for hard words because her work on the inside did not please the woman we were working for.

"I think that Miss Olsen and I were drawn together because of our trouble on the farm. Mrs. Gunness noticed that there was sympathy between us and after that we had the greatest difficulty in meeting. Still we managed to meet quite often until October.

"It was in the early part of last month that I was invited from my quarters in the barn to meet some friends of Mrs. Gunness in the house. This was unusual, as Mrs. Gunness usually kept very much to herself. I was given to understand that I must not enter the house unless it was necessary.

Heard Girl's Death Cry.

"I went up to the house that night and she introduced me to a man and woman. I forget their names, but she told me the man was a professor in a college and the woman was his wife. Then the old lady told me I would have to sleep in the barn that night because her guests would make a stay of some time while they talked about the college. Jennie was going to, and then I got up and went out to do my chores. It was pretty tired, so I went to sleep in the barn.

"I was awakened in the middle of the night by a great noise coming from the house. Just as I woke up I heard a terrible scream from the direction of the house, and, jumping up, ran out to listen.

"I made up my mind I must have been dreaming and went back to sleep. In the morning when I was at my chores Mrs. Gunness came up to me and told me that Jennie had left. She said Jennie had gone to school with the professor and his wife."

Find Human Jawbones.

Portions of human jawbones and a piece of skin, on which traces of hair are apparent, and which may prove to be a part of a human scalp, were found to-day in the cellar of the Gunness Farmhouse.

The bones were found by the men who have been sifting the ashes in the cellar of the house, under the direction of Sheriff Smutzer. This process was begun to-day as a preliminary to the digging work by Louis C. Schultz, the object being the removal of the coarser debris before the stuff was put into the sluice box. Shortly after it was begun several large pieces of metal and a watch came rattling down the screen. The sheriff at once ordered one of the men to sort over the larger pieces and two portions of human jawbones were found. The piece of skin was also found by this method, the men discovering being made to examine the last begun work on the portion of the cellar where the bodies had been.

39 POLICEMEN TELL OF GUARD OVER BALLOTS

Record For Progress Made in Proceedings to Test McClellan's Right to Office.

RECOUNT WILL BEGIN SOON

NEW YORK, May 15.—In examining sixty-nine witnesses yesterday all records were broken for number of witnesses called and progress made in a single day in the quo warranto proceedings to test the legality of McClellan's certificate of election as Mayor. Eight policemen testified before Justice Lambert in the morning and thirty-one in the afternoon. As a result Attorneys Charles A. Dolson and Clarence J. Shearn placed before Justice Lambert all the testimony concerning the guarding of the Manhattan voted ballots and ballot boxes while in storage.

To-day the lawyers will begin examining policemen who carried ballot boxes from polling places on election night of 1905 to the police stations. About one hundred and fifty more policemen must be examined.

Hundreds of policemen have testified already to sealing and locking the boxes. Not out of the 1,000 used in last election seventy-two are yet to be traced, and Mr. Dolson will begin to-day to offer proof that these few boxes were sealed and locked by the inspectors of election and carried to the police stations by two policemen in the same condition in which they were turned over to them by the first inspector. So rapid has been the progress during the last week that Mr. Dolson and Mr. Shearn hope that the actual recount of the ballots may be begun soon. Several important questions remain to be disposed of, and no definite time has been fixed for beginning the recount.

NAME MACHINE MEN TO-NIGHT

Two of the Boston congressional districts, the Ninth and Tenth, will hold conventions to-night and elect delegates to the national convention already selected by the new Lomasney-McNary-Fitzgerald political alliance.

The Ninth convention will be held in Faneuil Hall, and Henry S. Fitzgerald, brother of the former Mayor, and former Representative Daniel J. McDonald of Ward 3 are the delegates slated for election.

The Tenth convention will be held in the municipal building, Columbia road. President Leo F. McCullough of the Common Council and former Councilor Charles L. Quick of Ward 17 are the machine candidates.

Shocking outbursts of crazy religious fanatics. The death torture of little Rena Smith as a human sacrifice of the "Devil Chasers"; crucifixion of a pretty young wife by her fanatic husband. RESIGNS POST ON COMMITTEE

Rev. T. F. McCarthy, assistant pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church, Charlestown, has tendered his resignation as a member of Mayor Hibbard's nonpartisan committee in charge of the arrangements for the June 17 celebration in Charlestown.

"I am in no way with the affairs of my parish," said Father McCarthy to-day, "to give any time to the committee. I could not do the work in both, therefore had to resign from the committee. I could not neglect the affairs of my parish."

FAILS TO END QUINCY STRIKE

Mayor Shea's efforts looking to an immediate settlement of the Quincy granite strike has failed and there is to-day no apparently little hope of an early adjustment of the trouble. Besides the 500 cutters who went out yesterday, eighty test sharpeners have been compelled to stop work.

There are 119 association and six non-association firms shut down to-day, while thirty-six non-association firms are running as usual, as well as one firm which up to yesterday was a member of the association.

Greatest Offer Ever Made by a Merchant Tailor

I have satisfied my creditors by settling with them for 75 cents on the dollar and now resume business again under my own name. During the regime of the receiver things were permitted to run topsy turvy and existing conditions call for an immediate reorganization. Rather than attempt the task of repricing and overhauling the stock now on the tables, I have decided to clear out everything on hand and begin over again with fresh goods.

CURE BY CUTICURA AT CITY MISSION

Young Woman Found in Awful Condition with Scabies—Body a Mass of Sores from Scratching—Tried Many Remedies for Seven Weeks—Result Was Discouraging, But

ITCHING TORTURES YIELDED TO CUTICURA

"While I was doing missionary work in the lower portion of several cities I found it necessary to know a little of the efficacy of a few medicines and after a while I found that a little knowledge of Cuticura was about all I needed. One of the very bad cases I had to deal with was that of a young woman who had come to us not only broken in spirit but in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incipient paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure and the effects of her ragged clothing. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We tried many things, a good tonic was prescribed and baths with a rubbing of lard and sulphur. We worked hard for seven weeks and you can imagine how discouraged we were when, after all that time, we could see so little improvement. One day I happened to see a Cuticura advertisement telling how a little baby had been cured of a bad case of skin eruption, and although I had but ninety-seven cents with me, I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. When I reached home I was like a child with a new toy, and we bathed our patient well and gave her a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept that night better than she had since she had been with us and the next day I located the price of a box of Cuticura Ointment. I am not exaggerating when I say that in exactly five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, being strong enough to work and full of ambition. In another month she left the home, and now has a good position in a nice family where she is respected and is strong and well. You may refer any one you wish to me, personally, Laura Jane Bates, 63 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Mar. 11, 1907."

WITNESS ON RACK IN CHILD DEATH MYSTERY

POLICE NOW SEEK NEW SUSPECT AS SLAYER OF LITTLE LOUISE STAULA.

After spending the night in the police station at Dedham following five hours of grilling on the rack of cross-examination as to his movements on last Monday evening when little Louise Staula was slain in the Charles river meadows, Francesco Tesaro, or Yeage, sometimes more familiarly known as "Charlie Cole," was to-day questioned further in connection with the mysterious crime.

State Detectives Flynn and Grady went this afternoon to a small building on one of the islands of the Charles river meadows, which can only be approached by the use of a boat. They went to make a search of the place, but so far if any evidence could be found that it had been occupied by anyone remains.

The detectives planned to take Francesco to the field this afternoon and have him stand at the spot where the man was observed on Monday evening from the railway coach. The witnesses who have testified that they saw a man and a child in the meadows at that time will take their position on the railroad and see if Francesco has the appearance of the man they observed.

Francesco maintained with unbroken persistence that he was not in the meadows on Monday evening and that he did not harm the little girl. The young man declared that he was at the Boston line at 5 o'clock on that evening and that he had walked home from there. It has been proven that he reached home about 7 o'clock.

A number of witnesses who saw a man and a little girl near the scene of the tragedy at about the time it occurred said that Francesco was not the man they had observed. They declare that the man in the field was of larger build than the man now in custody.

Search for Second Man.

The police have been asked to look for a second man in the case, and the following description of him has been spread broadcast in this section of the State:

Height—Five feet 7 or 8 inches.
Weight—Between 180 and 190 pounds.
Complexion—Swarthy.
Mustache—Dark.
Clothing—Dark.
Hat—Either soft or a derby with a dent in it.

Police Inspector Frederick F. Flynn made this statement about the case to-day:

"We threshed out the matter over for hours and gave the man the worst grueling I have seen for a long time, and with but few exceptions his story can be proved and is reasonable. Of course there are a few discrepancies, but these are liable to occur in the actions of any one. Any slight inaccuracies that may have occurred are easily explained. There is nothing against him.

"There were fifteen witnesses examined, and of these three on trains passing the locality at 5:10 o'clock and 5:15 o'clock saw a little girl on the hill picking flowers and at the base, near the swamp, was a man, a stranger. He, they all agree, was not Yeage.

Saw Man Near Scene of Crime.

"One of these witnesses saw the man bend over near a tree and said that he was about five feet seven or eight inches in height, was stocky, and weighing somewhere from 180 to 190 pounds, and wore a soft hat. One had it was a brown hat, dented in, and that the man wore a mustache, was dark complexioned, being possibly a mulatto or a very dark Italian.

"A passenger on the 5:45 train saw a man near the scene of the crime, just beyond Mother Brook toward West Roxbury, run into the pines or brush on the nearest knoll. This witness knew Yeage, having worked with him on the railroad, but the man he saw was not him, as he was much stouter and wore a soft brown hat.

"Two passengers on the train, which passes a short distance from where the Staula child was slain, saw the suspect. As these two persons, whose names are withheld by the police, looked out of the car window they distinctly made out the form of the little girl at the top of the knoll, stopping now and then to pick the blue petalled flowers that were found there abundantly.

"At the foot of the knoll, within sight of the train but not where he could be seen by the child, unconscious of the danger, was the man. His shoulders were somewhat bent and in the fleeting glimpses which the two passengers caught of him, they noticed that his gaze was directed toward the spot where the child was at play. He seemed to be screening himself from her view.

Passengers Forgot Incident.

That was all the two passengers saw. They forgot the incident until they learned of the murder. Then they visited until they had made a test of the scene from another train and decided that they had seen Louise Staula and the man who killed her.

The next person who believes that he, too, saw the murderer was a passenger on the train which reaches Dedham at 5:50 p. m. He was looking out of the window as the train approached the station and saw a man run up the knoll beyond the one on which the child was murdered and as the train passed screen himself behind a tree. But he was seen and his general description noted.

This man indeed his seat companion and remarked: "That man is trying to keep out of sight. He must have done something."

Another man forgot the incident until late last night. Then he came forward and told about it.

U. S. GUNNERS THE SENSATION OF THE WORLD

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Declaring that the record made in the target practice of the American fleet at Magdalena Bay shattered all records existing, whether of the American, British, French, Japanese, German or any other navy, Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans said to-day:

"If that report is given out, and I believe it should be, it will cause the most profound sensation in naval, and consequently in political, circles that the world has had for a long time.

"What was the greatest lesson to be drawn from the cruise of the fleet? was the question put to the Admiral.

"The one overshadowing lesson to be drawn is this—we need as big a Pacific fleet as on the Atlantic," he replied. "Instead of the twenty-nine battle ships that we now have we should have forty-eight.

"That fleet was fifty per cent more fit for active duty when it completed the cruise than it was when it began it."

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, formerly Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic battleship fleet, reached his home in Washington last night, after a five-day transcontinental trip, looking well and in the best of spirits. He was accompanied by Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Charles C. March, his daughter; Lieutenant Frank T. Evans, his son; Lieutenant-Commander Lloyd H. Chandler, his aide; Lieutenant Charles R. Train, flag lieutenant; Lieutenant Walter R. Gherardi and Passed Assistant Surgeon William N. McDonnell.

SWEETHEART SLAIN BY BOY WHO HID BODY

KANAB, Utah, May 15.—A counterpart of the Chester Gillette case was revealed here to-day when Alvin Heaton, eighteen years old, confessed that he had murdered his sweetheart, Mary Stevens, in a canyon back of the town of Orderville. Heaton confessed only after two weeks of constant "sweating."

He killed the girl after she had pleaded with him to marry her. Heaton and the girl were schoolmates and two years ago became sweethearts. The girl's parents did not frown on his suit, as he was of a good family. Three months ago the girl begged him to marry her. Heaton tried to cast her off and she wrote pitiful letters, pleading with him to fulfill his promise.

Heaton asked her to meet him in the canyon back of Orderville, where he killed her. He secreted the body under a pile of rocks.

FAMINE PERIL BY GRASSHOPPER PEST

BRINDISI, May 15.—A famine is threatened on account of the invasion of a vast army of grasshoppers, which have invaded the fields of peasants and villages, bringing destruction to crops. The pests are coming from Gallipoli and Taranto and the peasants are desperate. Every means possible is being used to drive out the pests.

SOCIALIST? I HAVE RECEIVED HARDER NAMES

—ROCKEFELLER

NEW YORK, May 15.—John D. Rockefeller, at his country home in Pocantico Hills, laid down his evening paper last night and scratched his wig.

"Was is this Mr. Hunter that he is such a sect?" he inquired. He was told that Robert Hunter was a millionaire Socialist, who had startled the national convention in Chicago by proclaiming the Standard Oil man his "comrade."

Hunter is reported to have said:

"Not only is John D. Rockefeller a Socialist, but he is on record as opposing a reactionary movement in American colleges of to-day, especially as it is carried out at Yale and Harvard. The Rev. Dr. Charles L. Akod of New York is admittedly a Fabian Socialist, and it was because of this fact that the Standard Oil magnate brought him to America."

"Oh, he is a young man of wealth, you say, spending his money trying to reform the world," commented Rockefeller. "He is stirring up more discontent than he is doing good. I have been called a great many things a Socialist is one of the mildest."

CREW IS RESCUED.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 15.—Five men, comprising the crew of the schooner William McKee, were rescued to-day from what appeared certain death when the vessel went ashore off Townsend's Inlet bar.

NO MORE DRINKING FOR FRICK MINERS

PITTSBURG, May 15.—The H. C. Frick Coke Company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, has made a new code of rules for its miners and miners, the most remarkable of which is one prohibiting the miners from drinking, whether on duty or off.

NEWS OF LABOR.

International President Neill, who was unanimously re-elected at the convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Employes which closed last night in a statement to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day, said:

"Plans have already been made for an extended and active organizing campaign. The roads which are to be taken up first are the Grand Trunk System, Northern Pacific, Reid-Newfoundland and Union Pacific. These will be organized by district deputies and organizers under the immediate charge of the officers.

LABOR NOTES.

A committee from the Boston Joint Teamsters' Council will wait on Superintendent Emerson of the street department in relation to the dropping of union members. The council will petition the Board of Aldermen to change the opening hours of the most important bridges s that they will remain closed between 7 and 9 a. m. each day.

Carriage and Wagon Workers have voted to request the Boston Central Labor Union to see that no vehicle of any kind takes parts, in the Labor Day parade which does not bear the union label. Two more shop crews were admitted to membership at the last meeting and notice received that all boat shops are granting the six months' backpay holidays, beginning this month.

Bakers, No. 7, will hold their meeting next after on the second and fourth Saturday nights of each month at No. 1499 Washington street.

The Layers, No. 22, have elected Joseph Griffin and Henry Minot as delegates to the international convention to be held in Kansas City, Mo., on June 8. All members are requested to be working.

Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers, No. 72, will decide at their next meeting whether to join the Boston C. L. U. and its Building Trades Section.

Electrical Workers, No. 104, have elected H. M. Patton delegate to the Building Trades Section. Beginning 15th Wednesday, May 20, the initiation fee to the local will be $15. At the first meeting 50 or more shops were reported unionized.

A mass meeting was held last night by the Stone masons in Labor Hall, Field's Corner.

Electrical Finishers, No. 189, have appointed a committee to investigate the rumors that non-union men were working at City Hall. Five men have been elected to the Building Trades Section.

DEBS CHOSEN AS CANDIDATE BY SOCIALISTS

CHICAGO, May 15.—Amid charges of gag rule and excitement verging upon the riotous, Eugene V. Debs once more was selected as the presidential nominee of the Socialist party at an early hour to-day. Although the convention which nominated him had been in continuous session at Brands Hall for nearly eighteen hours, the "comrades" still were delirously enthusiastic and as loquacious as when the meeting first was called to order.

There were a score of delegates who insisted that Chairman Stanley J. Clark of Texas was running things with a high hand, and that they had been gagged. One delegate even insisted before a vote upon the candidates had been taken that Debs should be honest enough to refuse to be a candidate when nominated by gag rule.

It was Comrade F. H. Varley who made the speech nominating Debs.

At the mere mention of the veteran candidate's name the delegates sprang upon chairs, hurled hats, books and papers in the air, and cheered spasmodically.

Then A. Simmons, editor of the Chicago Daily Socialist; Rev. (?) D. Thompson of Milwaukee and James F. Carey of Massachusetts were nominated.

Debs's nomination was finally made unanimous. The final votes were: Debs, 142; Carey, 16; Thompson, 14; Simmons, 6.

As Debs is ill at his home, someone provided a large pastel portrait of the candidate and hoisted it over the heads of the delegates, amid cheering and shouting that caused the policeman on the corner to raise his head and wonder if this was the long-expected trouble.

Ben Hanford of New York, who was Debs's running mate four years ago, was selected as the candidate for Vice-President.

"The devil himself designed women's fashions!" So declares the Rev. Dr. Bass of St. Louis, as he looks about him and gazes upon the Merry Widow hat, the Serpentine Silhouette, etc. See next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

GOVERNORS PLAN UNION TO PROTECT RESOURCES

MAY VOTE TO OPPOSE INJUNCTIONS OF FEDERAL COURTS—CONFERENCE ENDS TO-DAY.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—To-day, the last of the conference of Governors at the White House, it is expected, will see definite action taken by the conference to save the nation from the dangers of soil waste and forest depletion. The present plan is to form a permanent organization of Governors, independent of any other organization which may be formed by the conference itself. The resolutions committee reports early to-day.

The Governors may vote to unite in opposition to injunction of Federal courts. Governor Folk has already outlined to the conference the advantages which would arise from a separate organization of Governors and declared that the question of injunctions is but one of a number of important matters which may well come before such an organization.

Startling was the warning sounded at the conference of the danger the nation confronts in the wasting of natural resources. The Governors listened and talked and applauded.

A plan is on foot to have the prepared speeches for to-day printed in the record with other reading matter, so that the time may be devoted wholly to results.

A supplementary meeting of a number of Governors followed yesterday's session and a committee consisting of the Governors of Kentucky, Missouri and Nebraska was appointed to bring a suggestion for a permanent organization of Governors, independent, perhaps, of any other organization which may be formed by the conference. The President opened the morning and afternoon sessions, which were thereafter presided over by Governor Johnson of Minnesota and Governor Deneen of Illinois, respectively.

James J. Hill, of the Great Northern, who led a long list of speakers, treated the depletion of the country's resources in a very serious and impressive way. He predicted conditions requiring minerals, soil and forest, showing wanton waste in each instance, and drew a picture of political chaos when all were gone, wherein the public would tear down the very pillars of government. Mr. Hill believed such results could and should be avoided by prompt action.

At the meeting of the Governors called immediately after the end of the session, Governor Folk outlined the advantage which would follow an organization of Governors independent of the present conference. He favored at once such a step for the Federal courts had recently made of the process of injunctions. He had been enjoined, Governor Johnson had been enjoined, and Governor Glenn also had been prohibited from enforcing State laws respecting railways. There were other important subjects that Governor Folk believed might properly come before an organization of Governors, and a half dozen or fourteen Governors were present Governor Johnson suggested that they might be taken up at another meeting to be called at the close of the session to-day, which was concurred in.

ing, May 29. Bert Hoey will be floor director, Thomas Hoey assistant floor director, Richard Hall chief of aids and John Connolly prompter, while over a score of club members will officiate as aids.

M'INTYRE SUMMONED TO COURT TO-DAY

NEW YORK, May 15.—A subpoena has been served on Thomas A. McIntyre, directing him to appear before Commissioner Gilchrist at 2 o'clock to-day for examination in bankruptcy.

Judge Hough has designated Dr. Charles L. Dana to make a physical examination of Mr. McIntyre and report to the court whether he is physically able to appear.

JACKY'S FRIEND A SHOPLIFTER

Nellie Pearson, giving her address as No. 37 Severn street, Lynn, who was one of the two young girls who in April created a sensation when they were found visiting with two sick marines in the Chelsea Naval Hospital, is to-day an inmate in the Lancaster Reformatory because she was arrested for shoplifting.

It was after the girl's release from the Marine Hospital, where she had been quarantined after being arrested by the federal authorities on account of her having been exposed to diphtheria, that the shoplifting occurred.

She was arrested by Inspector Knox on May 9, and gave her name as Blanche Howard and her age as nineteen. Probation Officer Mrs. Tuttle questioned her. The girl said to Mrs. Tuttle that she was sixteen, and not nineteen, and she was sent to the Juvenile Court.

There Judge Baker found out from her that she was one of the girls who had stolen into the Marine Hospital to visit the marines, and that her real name was Nellie Pearson. Accordingly yesterday afternoon the judge sent her to the reformatory.

A. O. H. BAZAR TO STAY OPEN

With a record-breaking attendance, the bazar being conducted under the direction of the Hibernian Building Fund Association in Vine Hall, Dudley and Vine streets, Roxbury, has been very successful.

In order to satisfy all who desire to attend the offices of the organization decided last night to continue the affair until to-morrow evening when it will close with appropriate exercises.

Fifteen branches of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and two divisions of the Ladies' Auxiliary have tables filled out with costly novelties of varied descriptions. These are in charge of committees. To the table bringing in the most money at the end of the fair a handsome recompense will be given by the general committee.

NOTED PAINTING AT SHUMAN'S

One of the most valuable and beautiful paintings in the world is now on exhibition in the juvenile department of A. Shuman & Co.'s store, and for the rest of May it will be open to public view. The management of the store invites all to look at it. It is called "The Village Blacksmith," and is by the brush of H. De Marcan, one of the best of modern painters. The artist has taken for his theme the character of Henry W. Longfellow's popular poem:

"Under the spreading chestnut tree the village smithy stands.
The smith a mighty man is he with broad and sinewy hands.
And the muscle of his brawny arms are strong as iron bands."

The picture is 8x7 in dimensions, and pictures the blacksmith standing at his forge, where he is heating a horseshoe. The painting expresses with a rare skill the idealization of a workingman intended by the great poet. The painting is valued at $50,000.

MAN IS SHOT, WOMAN HELD

Peter McPhee, twenty-four, of No. 234 Charles street, is at the City Hospital, shot through the right hip, while Fenwick Moore, twenty-two, and colored, addresses unknown, is held at the Dedham street station charged with the shooting.

The affair is one of mystery to the police. The woman emphatically denies she did the shooting, while the injured man declares that he does not know the woman or any reason why she should want to shoot him.

According to the story given out at the station house McPhee was walking along Harrison avenue when, without warning, he was shot. He staggered toward Washington street, where he met an officer and was sent to the hospital. A short time later the woman was taken from a house on Norwich street.

HOW ABSURD AND UNJUST!

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts requires of its own corporations the strictest regard to corporate integrity.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts requires of its own railroad, street railway, electric light, and gas companies, the strictest observance of the anti stock-watering laws in the issue of their stock and bonds.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company is not a Massachusetts corporation. It is true, it has a Massachusetts charter concurrent with an old Connecticut charter, but

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company in the issue of stock, bonds, and other securities, disregards Massachusetts laws.

First. Its stock is issued under and by virtue of the Connecticut laws, and without any reference whatever to the anti stock-watering laws of Massachusetts.

Second. Its bonds and notes are issued entirely without reference to our anti stock-watering laws.

Third. Without authority of Massachusetts, it merged May 31, 1907, with another Connecticut corporation carrying on a different kind of business.

Fourth. This merger involved the taking on of new property other than railroad property, so that after the merger the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, under authority of Connecticut, but not of Massachusetts, could do any business its directors might authorize or ratify, and issue any and all kinds of stock, bonds, notes, or other securities.

Fifth. It bought steamboats and steamship lines.

Sixth. It bought trolley stock and trolley lines.

Seventh. It has loaned many millions of money to trolley and steamboat lines, doing, in this way, to all intents and purposes, a banking business.

Eighth. It owns and conducts gas companies, electric light companies and power companies.

All this is done contrary to the spirit of our Massachusetts corporation laws.

ON THE OTHER HAND:

Massachusetts requires of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, of the Edison Electric Light Company, of the Boston Elevated Railroad Company, of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and all its public service corporations, the strictest observance of the spirit and letter of the anti stock-watering laws.

How inconsistent it would be for this Legislature to insist, as it does, and properly, upon the observance of the strictest safeguards in the consolidation of the Boston Elevated Railway with the West End Street Railway Company, as to capital stock, bonds, and corporate obligations, and at the same time to allow a Connecticut corporation to exploit a railroad company in this Commonwealth, and to leave the door open to unlimited stock watering.

How can this Legislature, or any public officer, having in mind our anti stock-watering principles, commend for one minute the control of the Boston & Maine Railroad by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company.

This control would result in handing over to a Connecticut corporation a Massachusetts railroad, which, with reference to its issue of capital stock and bonds, has acted consistently with the statutes of this Commonwealth.

It would result in putting this Massachusetts corporation and property into the hands of a Connecticut corporation, which, without any limitation whatever, without any reference to any stock-watering laws or any conservative business policy in the issue of securities, stock, bonds, or other obligation, could retire all the present Boston & Maine stock and securities and issue therefor any quantity of securities and obligations it might be necessary to issue for its own purposes and the purposes of those who are interested in the exploitation, stock gobbling, and manipulation of stocks and securities.

Regardless of any other consideration, Massachusetts cannot afford to give to a foreign corporation doing business in this Commonwealth privileges which it denies to its own corporations.

Merola With Acrobatic Grace Conducts Grand Opera at the Majestic Theatre

First Movement.

Second Speed.

This Is Easy.

All Over.

Gastone Merola, who will conduct the orchestra at the Knickerbocker Opera Company's production of "Il Trovatore" at the Majestic Theatre to-night, is one of the greatest conductors Boston has seen since the days when Creatore set the city wild with enthusiasm.

Every wave of his baton not only inspires his orchestra of fifty pieces to their best efforts, but also thrills the audience to the truest appreciation of the music. There is melody and rhythm in his every motion.

Merola is a born musician. At the age of twelve he was the first violinist in an orchestra in his native city, Naples. There his talent attracted the attention of a noble man who sent him to one of the best musical schools in Italy.

From that time on his rise to fame was rapid.

Filled Many Important Places.

During the next few years he filled important positions in famous orchestras in all the great musical centres of Europe. It was seven years ago that an offer from

Has Remarkable Memory.

Among conductors Merola is remarkable for his wonderful memory. There are more than a score of operas for which he requires no score. He knows not only all the famous Italian operas, but also the greatest French and German works as well. In "Il Trovatore," which he will conduct to-night he is at his best.

112 TEACHERS FEAR THE LOSS OF ANNUITIES

Their Pensions Are Theratened With Reduction by Pension Fund Bill.

One hundred and twelve women, formerly teachers in the public schools of Boston and now receiving annuities from the teachers' retirement fund, established in 1900, wait almost hopelessly to-day for the fate of the Pension Fund Bill in the State Senate.

The bill has been so amended in the House, at the suggestion of Chairman James J. Storrow of the School Committee, as to drop the annuitants from its provisions.

"The School Committee of the city of Boston," says the bill, "shall forthwith establish a permanent school pension fund for the payment of pensions to the members of the teaching or supervising staff of the public day schools of the city of Boston at a rate of not exceeding $150 per year."

The total expenditure will amount to between $60,000 and $65,000 a year, to be raised by adding five cents to the amount now collected for school purposes on every thousand dollars of valuation.

Their Protection Stricken Out.

What alarms the 112 annuitants of to-day is the fact that the House has stricken from the bill the words: "including among such teachers all those persons entitled to receive an annuity in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 237 of the Acts of 1900."

The present annuitants have paid $540 into the Teachers' retirement fund of 1900. They are receiving $180 per annum. Their fear is that the present fund will be so depleted when it is called upon to take care of other veterans who have rights in it that the annuities may may fall as low as $50. Since 1900 the public school teachers have been assessed $18 a year for the Retirement Fund.

Only fifteen out of the forty Massachusetts Senators voted yesterday on Senator Linehan's motion to put the annuitants back into the bill. And these fifteen voted ten to five against the old teachers.

Motion to Reconsider.

When a roll call was refused him, less than the required number of Senators joining in the demand for it, the South Boston senator moved for "reconsideration," and pleading the cause of superannuated teachers whose lives of sacrifice he likened to the soldier's, made an impassioned attack on Chairman Storrow.

The vote for "reconsideration" was still pending when the Senate adjourned until 11 o'clock to-day.

AWARD PRIZE TO CHARMING GIRL 'AMERICAN' GIRL AMATEURS WIN

Dressed attractively and tastefully to represent the BOSTON AMERICAN, Miss Ethel Murphy was unanimously awarded one of the ladies' prizes for the most original costume at the fancy dress party of Norwood Bookbinders' Union, No. 176, in Couger Hall, Norwood, last evening. Miss Murphy's costume was so arranged as to show all parts of the paper. The party was the largest dance held in Norwood this season, nearly five hundred people being present.

Eugene L. Murphy, who has just been elected twelfth district alternate to the Independence League National Convention, was floor manager, with Miss Mary Murphy as assistant and members of the union as aids.

The judges were Joseph P. McManus, international organizer of the Bookbinders' Union, James H. Butler and William T. Brown. The affair reflected great credit on the members of Norwood Bookbinders' Union, and was a success in every way.

YARMOUTH SHAKEN BY QUAKE SHOCK

YARMOUTH, N. S., May 15.—A distinct shock of an earthquake was felt here at midnight. Houses trembled and a loud report, as of heavy thunder, accompanied the shock. No damage is reported.

Very few musical shows that played Boston this season could produce a trio of young women that could equal in looks, voice and figure the three pretty damsels that graced the amateur bill at the Columbia last evening. Their very appearance was the occasion of an outburst of applause heartier than all the plaudits that greeted the best work in the burlesque show. Miss Kittie Harding, one of the finds of the season, was the first of the beauties to make an appearance, and although given a bad place on the bill she was well remembered when the time came for awarding the prizes. Miss Alice Hamilton, a tall and decidedly stunning girl, proved her worth as a singer by rendering in a most finished manner a high-class ballad. To Miss Ethel O'Sullivan, however, fell the lion's share of the honors, her pleasing stage presence and superb figure making her the biggest favorite of the evening. These young women and the acrobatic team of Bartel and Lett were the prize winners. Tonight's amateur bill will be fully as interesting.

WINCHESTER HERO DIES.

Carry Them With You—Don't Wait Till Night

Cathartics are taken at bedtime, because they cause griping. You want it to occur at night.

So you go through the day with a headache—a dullness. And the day is lost.

That is wrong because it is unnecessary.

There is a laxative that never gripes—that gives instant help when you need it.

A laxative in vest-pocket boxes, so one may always have it ready.

That laxative is Cascarets.

Don't delay helping the bowels until you need a violent physic.

Harsh physic wrecks both the stomach and bowels. It leads to dyspepsia—to constipation.

And think of the days you lose.

Keep yourself always at your best, by taking one Cascaret the moment you need it.

In a little time all will be right.

You can't do this with cathartics, but you can with Cascarets. For Cascarets are as harmless as food.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with C C C on every tablet. The box is marked like this:

Mirandy on the Signs of the Tender Passion

By Dorothy Dix

"LAST night" said Mirandy, "Ah- flat'day night an' tries to figger out how out whedder she is gwine to make me de happiest man in creation, or throw Jerseif away on dat low-lifed, ugly, dandy-legged Tom Simmons, what is always a-hangin' around her in de most disgustin' way, dat makes me want to wring his miserable ole neck ev'y time I runs across him baldin' dat way.

"Now, Sis Mirandy, you knows Saliny Sue, an' you knows me, an' I axes you how is I gwine to tell befo' hand what Saliny Sue is gwine to say when I axes to fetch up a heart of ice, but of Saliny her to marry me?

"Is she in love wid me, or is she isn't? Is she cuttin' my ice cream an' chawin' my gum because she lores me, or does she jest got a sweet tooth? As a woman, what hast been counted yo'self an' is been sign of love in a gal?

"Shoo, I spose, sort of soothin,' for is a pleasant evenin' for a moonlight stroll? Abra'm. "I done tole jes' a hundred times, maybe mo', about de dog Tige, what was she jest had to go away back an' set down

He even tried to serenade her, trying to touch her heart

Saliny Sue's Brindle Dog

"Sue is give any sign of de feelin' bein' mutual, I aint been quick enough to ketch on. "She's got me guessin'," Sis Mirandy, "an' I'm jest got a sweet tooth? As a woman, an' hit's a'c' on me onlel I is took up my vest onlel hit looks like a accordion in de back, and de fronds laps over double in front.

"I is done even los' my nerve, so I ain't got no spunk to pop de question, and dat Abra'm had got all het up wid worryin' fir dat she hasn't done's a church fair an' supper or de Methodist parsonage? Or dat she is jest dyin' to see dat new show?"

"She say as how dat she prefers a quiet evenin' at home wid de lamp turned down low," says Abra'm.

"Good," 'sclaims I, 'as long as a gal chases you around an' ev'y dog fight in de neighborhood, she's des gittin' de wuth of her money out of you. You is des a convenience, an' any udder man wid de price of pony waster an' shoot tickets would do des as well; but when she is willin' to stay at home wid you, she's beginnin' to set up an' take notice.

"The next point is, what does she talk about? Does she talk you about when you was a little boy wid warts on yo' hands, an' want to hear you tell ever again about childhood's happy hours, an' yo' ole home?"

"That she does, Sis Mirandy, 'spons in, said dat dough'she had a master hand herself at cookin', as ev'body knowed, dat she never had no gif' a'ter dat I had when I was a boy, an' she say dat is de most interestingest tale she ever heard."

"Bless de lamb, says I, 'things shorely is comin' yo' way, for hit takes affection to make a body stand for de reminiscences of our youth. Does she likewise lend a ear whilst you discourses 'bout what you does down at de shop, an' what de boss says to you an' you says to de boss?

"She cuttinly does, says Abra'm, 'but, Sis Mirandy——"

"Don't say a word,' says I; 'dat shows dat she is thinkin' about havin' a sheer in yo' joys an' sorrows. No woman has got de patience to listen to a man tell about how he made his poster salesn ahn has got her eye on hit. Hit don pass on to anodder gal dat is failin' to see drawed any of her pictures.

"I never see sech plea an' angel food as she passed out last night' says Abra'm, 'an' her Ms. what neber casual dropped in, said dat dough'she had a master hand herself at cookin', as ev'body knowed, dat she had to go away back an' set down a'ter our dat I had when I was a boy, an' she say dat is de most interestingest tale she ever heard.'

"Bless de lamb, says I, 'things shorely is comin' yo' way, for hit takes affection to make a body stand for de reminiscences of our youth. Does she likewise lend a ear whilst you discourses 'bout what you does down at de shop, an' what de boss says to you an' you says to de boss?

when Saliny Sue tackled de range.'

"Um-h-m," says I, 'I was.' Gal in love, an' mother willin' an' pushin' along de game. Why, Abra'm, dat prasin' of Saliny Sue's cookin' by her Ma was des de same as sayin', "Heaven bless you, my children," an' you gone to have a gal an' she brings out somethin' she has made wid her own hands, hit's time to be huntin' for a weddin' ring.

The Final Test

"But here's de last test—is Saliny Sue got anxious about yo' health?

"How come you ax dat, Sis Mirandy?' inquires dat big gallumox of a nigger, 'for only last night Saliny Sue say dat she's skeared dat I'se workin' too hard, an' bet me not to strain myself; an' when I tell her dat I is as strong as a mule, an' ain't never been sick in my life, she look at me sorter wistful, an' say dat I needs somebody to take keer of me; an' den she wrote her sister little brudder down to de same to see if I got my feet wet again' gwine in de damp of de evenin'.'

"Abra'm," spons I, 'when a woman begins to treat a big, double-jinted man lak you is lak a baby wid de measles, dat's not a smart baby at dat, she is so much to lore dat she has done lookin lose of her senses, an' nothin' but maternosy will cure her an' bring her back to reason.

"An' sometimes even dat don't; for I is still a wrappin' up likes a front after got dat thutty years of de measles. Yes, go an' symptom to Saliny Sue, for she's got all de symptoms of a mother, an' de best I is experienced 'em myself.'

"You reckon dat will still wuk, Sis Mirandy? axes Abr'am.

"Sho, I spose, sort of soothin,' for is a pleasant evenin' for a moonlight stroll? Abra'm. "I done tole jes' a hundred times, maybe mo', about de dog Tige, what was she jest had to go away back an' set down

The World's Debt to Mothers of Great Men

The Mother of Daniel O'Connell

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

THE Green Isle has never lacked for patriots—sons who loved her with an everlasting love—but of them all the greatest was Daniel O'Connell. "The Liberator," the indefatigable, uncompromising, unpossessable enemy of everything that was the enemy of his native land—and soul!

Born in 1775 and dying in 1847, he may be numbered in body, mind, heart and soul in the familiar lines:

Oh, Erin, shall it ever be mine
To right thy wrongs in battle line,
To raise thy victor-head, and see
Thy hills, thy dales, thy people free?
That glance of bliss is all I crave
Between my labors and the grave.

If ever man had one purpose, and but one, that man was Daniel O'Connell, and that purpose was to make Ireland free.

It is unnecessary to tell the story here of that amazing man and his amazing life-work. It is known to all the world—the giant frame, the mighty physical strength, the imperial intellect, the eloquence that was able to sway men as the storm-wind sways the forest trees, the zeal that nothing could quench, and the great good nature that not even the failing sense of his country's wrongs could destroy—all talk is as familiar to us as a household word.

Wonderful Mother

THE man who has not heard of Daniel O'Connell has heard of nobody, and my ax "Summer's gone" is the heart that has most beat with upward enthusiasm at the recital of the "Liberator's battle for Erin's rights.

Wonderful man, was Daniel O'Connell.

And he had a wonderful mother.

Catherine O'Mullane, wife of Morgan O'Connell and mother of the mighty orator, was a typical Celt, a typical Irish woman, with most of the good and with but few of the bad traits of the Irish character.

Level-headed, generous to a fault, brimful of fun, a frag believer in God and with a heart that overflowed with love and kindness for everybody, Catherine O'Connell was an honor to her country and to her race.

She was not an educated woman—few women in those days were educated—but Nature gave her a wonderful brain, lots of "hard, horse sense," and a real, discerning judgment that enabled her to hold her own with the best of them.

New Human Nature

WITH but little knowledge of books, she graduated with high honors from the school that prepared to hold an argument with almost any subject, even with the wittiest of the college folk.

University of Nature and Human Nature.

She was a great talker. It was as easy for her to talk as it is for a fish to swim or a bird to fly, and while she was a woman of innate refinement and good breeding when necessary, speech like lightning and burn like vitriol.

She hated with a holy hate every form of injustice and wrong. And fond of fun and play, any kind of imposition by one person upon another, aroused in her the fighting pluck, and she never hesitated to denounce the wrong that shocked her.

Like the true and faithful mother that she was, she would gather her little ones about her knees and impart to them by her simple, yet wise, methods the lessons born out of the truth and goodness of God's own unspoiled nature; and the lessons were not in vain.

One of those little ones, at least, grew up to be one of the greatest champions that the world has seen, and from the uplifting made by that lowly mother's life-asking.

Thanks to the companionship of his great and good mother, O'Connell was prepared to begin that wonderful agitation that to cease until justice for Ireland became a fact to be recognized and gloried in by all men.

Learn How to Be a Business Woman; It Pays

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR in about every three months I have a business talk with my brother.

Invariably at the end of the confab he favors me with a book of brotherly commiseration not unmixed with disgust.

What you don't know about business methods," he exclaims, with a sigh, "would fill a large book."

Now I am perfectly conscious of my failings in that direction, and I always make up my mind that I will know more the next time we talk; but some way I never get down to it in the desired peril.

I study the stock market and look wisely over preferred and common stock reports, and all the while I am hopelessly at sea.

Learn While Young

ALL this perplexity might have been avoided had I been taught even the rudiments of business methods when at school. Instead of looking hopelessly bewildered over a sum in long division, I might have been a female Pierpont Morgan of finance.

The moral of all this is that I advise my girl friends to learn the simple A B C of business methods, so that if the time ever comes when they have money matters to attend to they will know how to give them intelligent attention.

There is no sadder sight than that of a helpless woman, with three or four children on her hands, striving to manage her affairs and knowing nothing about them.

A woman in such circumstances is utterly at the mercy of some man. She is forced to ask advice, and the man of whom she asks it may be the soul of honor or he may be absolutely unscrupulous.

Should Keep Posted

EVERY married man should make a point of explaining to his wife what his business connections are and where she would stand in case of his death.

A woman crushed by grief and loneliness is pathetically ready to take advice from any one, and many a snug fortune has mysteriously melted away simply because its owner was not posted.

Every school girl should be taught the value of money, investments, etc.

The girl who owns her own money, and is provident enough to save part of it should have exact knowledge of how to best take care of it.

An occasional talk with her father or brother will help wonderfully.

The day is past when a lovely woman is supposed to be ignorant on all matters pertaining to politics or business.

The girl of to-day is expected to be alert and intelligent on every subject, from pie-making to financiering.

So be wide awake, my girls, and live up to your reputation.

What Kind of Candy Is This?

ANSWER:

The American Daily Short Story

The Dream and the Awakening

By HENRY LEWIS

AND there, in the midst of a chattering, fashionably clad throng, stood Mary, pink-cheeked, smiling and talking animatedly about art.

Mary in strange, aesthetic array, with the rose of her clinging gown coiled serpentwise about her feet and a rose tucked behind her dainty ear.

Could she be the demure, shrinking country girl whom Robert had escorted to the ball seven years ago?

Evidently the painting under consideration was the work of Mary's hands. It was a portrait of an amusingly tall, redhaired person whose scanty raiment was in eminent danger of slipping off altogether. Robert looked from Mary to the picture and back several times before his bewildered comprehension grasped the significant fact of her artistic achievement. Then, quite suddenly, Mary turned and saw him.

"Why, Robert Nearing!" she cried with unfeigned delight, going forward with outstretched hands. Robert, indeed I'm very glad to see you, really." These festive friends could look at my pictures and drink my health now and then," she explained, gaily. To the listening group she said, "This is an old friend from home, Mr. Nearing of Dillsboro. How are you, Robert?" she went on, cordially. "Have you come to stay a while?"

As a matter of fact, Robert had come to New York to stay, but he did not tell her so just then.

"Of course I'll stay for a little chat about home folks," she insisted. "I live here now, you know, and am trivial to everybody and being good bohemians we get on swimmingly together."

Robert strayed after the silken swaying figure that was in the pink-draped hall direct from the studio. A tall, satin lamp on the little stand threw a soft radiance over the pair as they sat down and seated herself with a smiling face. She was a picture of beautiful womanhood. Robert asked all manner of questions about his former sweetheart and listened with paralyzing thrush much talk of his ambition. Now that the realization to speak, there was had given him the right to a man against another man in his light—a man who had not the shadow of a chance, whom he had not the shadow of a chance.

Are you engaged to marry him?" he asked presently, in a hard, constrained voice that quite startled Mary.

"Oh, dear, no," she laughed. "We're chums—good fellows. He is a writer and like most of the tribe, poor and charming. He writes stories about me and poses for my sketches. Neither of us think of marriage."

"We have talked that question all over and come to a sensible understanding."

"And you've given up the idea of marrying?" Robert asked.

Dreaming!

Mary nodded and bit off the tip of the bud she toyed with.

"I don't like the idea of you living this way, Mary," said the young fellow, involuntarily glancing at the wine glasses.

"This is because of your admittedly one-sided view of things," she laughed, good-naturedly. "It is great fun, really. It spoils one for the humdrum of life of the old-fashioned stamp."

"That is just why I object to it. I'd rather see you happily married and settled down in what we call humdrum life than living as you do here. Couldn't you paint as well even if you were married?"

"Dear, no," said Mary, very positively, with a laugh at the absurdity of such a thought. "Marriage spells art. But what of yourself, Robert? Why don't you take your own advice and settle down?"

"Because," said Robert, gravely, "there is only one girl in the world to me, and she don't want me."

"I'm so sorry, Robert," she said simply. Her eyes strayed inadvertently to the picture in his hand, and she wondered vaguely if she was the only woman in the world to Ted Hartley.

If she should ever change her mind she will find me unchanged. I thing she knows that, although I have never told her so. I have loved her a good many years, and always will love her but—well, we are not to be. That's all."

Mary understood in a flash of regretful comprehension.

Robert suddenly called with the proofs of a story which he wanted Mary to read. It was a brilliantly written sketch of the decadent type, in which a man of wealth had wooed and won a less worldly woman.

"I don't like it," Mary told him frankly; "it leaves a bitter taste in the mouth."

"Plays well, though, and complexity," "And, by the way, the story is a true one."

"Are you a hero, Ted?"

"I am contented, unblushingly."

"And the girl—surely she is a myth?"

"Your quondam model, Blenor Frost."

"Ted, you deliberately made her believe that you cared."

"I succeeded perfectly, as you will see by the story."

Awakened

Mary's eyes hardened, and a curious pallor surpassed the rose of her cheek.

"Are you telling me the truth?" she asked in a low voice.

"This time—yes."

"Now I begin to understand the change in Elenor. I used to love to have her here, she was so unaffected and so delicious, so delightfully genuine. Then suddenly she grew moody. I thought that she had been with some artists because she no longer takes my letters, and I wrote to her. Ted Hartley? To be able to write well to analyze the motives of human beings is a most innocent life. Are you not proud of your accomplishment?"

"Mary, you are unjust. I am very ashamed to have touched hands with a man capable of such treachery."

Ted threw down his story and rose, but she waved him back, authoritatively and clasped her hands behind her.

"Ted, I am ashamed of your conduct. Nothing that you can say will lessen your guilt. Will you please go now before I expire you too much?"

Ted left the room, closed after him Mary sank into his vacated place on the divan and abandoned herself to the luxury of tears.

It was close upon dusk the next day when the train arrived in Mapleton. She gave her orders to the expressman, climbed wearily into the back which set off at once, and leaned her head in the corner of the village.

Suddenly she called to the driver, who slowed up cumbrously. She alighted and made her way over the little white gate of the lawn to the great front door, turned the handle of the latch and entered the living room and entered.

Mary, sitting in the glowing hearth, his dark head resting on the chair back, his hands clasped behind him, was in deep meditation. A red wave surged across his face and he threw a quick glance of startled amusement, but he said never a word.

Mary's voice called with the clear, melodious voice, "I have come back in my right mind —finished with Bohemia forever. Do you still want me?"

He rose and held out his arms, but she hesitated, her face blushing and paling by turns in wonderful confusion.

"Mary, I never wanted anything or any one so much in my life!" he cried.

Mary smiled radiantly.

"I'm so glad, Robert," she whispered.

A NOVEL BLOUSE

A NEW gingham or linen waist to cut straight up to the top of the neck, where it fits in somewhat the same way as a gored empire skirt fits the waist. To this is attached a turnover collar, which fastens in front with cameo pin. The effect of this novelty is very odd, but it is practical and washes well, while women of a special type, tall and little, it would look admirably.

CONFERENCE OF LAWYERS IN BIGNEY CASE

Case of Millionaire's Son Whose Auto Killed Woman Put Over for Week.

VICTIM DIES IN HOSPITAL

No attempt will be made to prosecute Harold O. Bigney, son of Colonel Sidney O. Bigney of the Governor's staff, on any more serious charge in connection with the death to-day of Mrs. Matilda Brooks of Mansfield, O., who was struck by the millionaire's automobile, until after the disposition in court on Friday next of the complaint against him for overspeeding the car at Newbury and Exeter streets on Saturday last when the accident occurred.

Samuel J. Elder, attorney for young Bigney, made this statement at the courthouse to-day to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"The application for a warrant has been withdrawn and will not be pressed until after the case charging Mr. Bigney with overspeeding is disposed of next Friday."

On Way to Hospital.

Mrs. Brooks was on her way to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where her daughter, Miss Hazen Brooks, a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, is lying ill with typhoid, when struck by the Bigney auto and thrown many distance. Mrs. Brooks died at the City Hospital to-day.

Young Mr. Bigney, whose father is a millionaire manufacturer of Attleboro, is one of the most prominent citizens of Attleboro, was charged with overspeeding and there were rumors that a more serious complaint would be entered against him when he and his young and beautiful wife entered the first session of the Municipal Court. Attorney Elder at once asked the court for a week's continuance, which was granted.

Then Attorneys Leonard G. Roberts and William A. Rich, who represented the Brooks family, accompanied by Mr. Elder and Mr. and Mrs. Bigney, went to the second session before Judge Sullivan was sitting.

Conference of Lawyers.

Attorneys Rich and Roberts and Police Sergeant Goode of the Hopkins street station, had a conference with Judge Sullivan while Mr. Elder remained in his seat. Neither of the Brooks attorneys would make any statement about the case to the press when asked if they had applied for a warrant. Judge Sullivan was asked regarding the conference and referred the reporter to Clerk Lord who would only say: "I have received no papers in this case."

It was subsequent to these proceedings that Attorney Elder made the statement that no warrant would be asked until after the pending charge against young Mr. Bigney had been disposed of.

"The devil himself designed women's fashions!" So declares the Rev. Dr. Bass of St. Louis, as he looks about him and gazes upon the Merry Widow hat, the Serpentine Silhouette, etc. See next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

REFEREE SAVED UNHOLZ FROM KNOCKOUT BLOW

BOER, ALTHOUGH BEATEN BY CHAMPION, PROVED HIMSELF A TOUGH CUSTOMER.

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 15.—It took Joe Gans of Baltimore several rounds to solve Boer Unholz's defence last night, but once Joe began to find openings for his uppercuts the Boer began to fade away.

The end came in the eleventh round, when the referee stopped the fight after Gans had felled Unholz with a terrific left swing. The battle was savagely fought throughout.

In the early stages of the fight the Boer appeared to be hurting Gans with left body blows. It was "Rudy's" custom to dive toward Gans and rain away at the stomach with the left. He also used overhand lefts and rights occasionally, but these blows did not bother the negro so much as those that took him in the middle.

The crowd cheered Unholz vociferously and some of the ringsiders shook their heads and remarked that things looked bad for the negro. Gans' lips were parted and he was sober-faced, too, but as he always has a serious expression when fighting, it was hard to tell just how Unholz's onslaught was affecting him.

Hard Work to Find an Opening.

Gans had great difficulty for a while in finding an opening for his right, as the Boer held both forearms in front of his face.

This guard, however, did not save Unholz from visitations of Gans's left. He was prodded on the mouth and nose continually.

Gans was jeered for his wretched attempts with the right in the third round. It seemed ridiculous that such a terrific boxer as Joe Gans should bungle his punches in such a manner, but he certainly could not find his opponent's head. Some of the uppercuts he tried looked as if they would reach the Hebrew's head and in the meanwhile the chunky little Boer was yards away, grinning at his puzzled adversary.

Unholz Went to the Floor.

Gans opened his ears down with a right uppercut in the fourth round, but as soon as Unholz heard the timekeeper's counting he lunged and jumped to his feet. He landed himself immediately and Gans was kept busy warding off the left punches for the body that followed every rush that Unholz made.

Somehow the Boer did not look so confident in the fifth round. Joe had him going now and kept out of range when ever Unholz tore in. Joe had also devised a kind of counter uppercut and he jammed his right through the Boer's guard over and over again. The Boer threw himself to the floor while swinging at Gans, and gave further evidence of wild fighting by putting in a foul body punch.

The Boer was down in the seventh round and mutters looked bad for him right then. It was a right uppercut while he had his head lowered that did the trick. He reeled over toward the ropes and landed himself to his feet. One of his seconds thought it was time to call a halt. He tossed a dump towel into the ring and followed it, one of the ways seconds have of giving up a fight. The Boer turned on his second and Referee Welch also took a hand. The second and the towel were both thrown out of the ring and the contest proceeded.

From this point on it was only a matter of rounds so far as the Boer's finish was concerned. The left eye was in bad shape and he was sent staggering repeatedly. He tried to carry himself in a jaunty way, but if was easy to be seen that his mind was not in accord with his bearing.

Gans Tired in Tenth.

Gans, through using the left and mauling, was a very tired champion by the time the tenth round was started, but he attended strictly to business and all of that. He found an opening for his right uppercut and once more the Boer dropped on his stomach. He grasped the ropes and pulled himself to his feet, but Gans banged him clear around the ring with lefts and rights.

The eleventh round saw the end of the contest. It was a left swing that sent Unholz to the floor. When he arose he seemed to be all at sea. He raised his arms to the fighting position but he faced in the direction entirely opposite from where Gans stood waiting. Then he turned weakly toward Gans, his eyes blinking and his actions generally those of a man whose senses were without fathoming. Referee Welch saw at a glance that the time had come to interfere. He stood between the Boer and Harry and motioned Gans to his corner.

The story of Unholz in a nutshell is that he is a tough customer. Matched against men of his own stamp, fighting Boers, for instance, he will give a good account of himself. He certainly belongs in the ring, but only until such time as Gans could size him up.

GANS CHALLENGED BY THREE MEN BEFORE THE FIGHT

PAVILION, SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 15.—At 9:10 p. m. Gans entered the ring. He was accompanied by Sam Berger, Jackson, Kid North, Willie Keefe and Jack O'Keefe. Gans wore the same old bathrobe and walked up and down each side of the ring with a serious expression on his face.

After a short delay the Boer, Unholz, put in an appearance. His seconds were Joe Thomas, Teddy Wolff, Jeffries, Joe O'Leary and Joe Stitch.

Referee Welch introduced the men. Jordan called Unholz "The Fighting Boer of Africa." Gans was described as the "first and only lightweight champion of the world." Gans and Unholz shook hands and it was noticed that the Boer was many inches shorter than his opponent.

Challenges to the winner from Cyclone Thompson and Johnny Frayne were announced.

Then Battling Nelson hopped upon the platform and challenged Joe Gans for five rounds or to a finish.

During a lull in the proceedings a sport by the ringside offered to bet $100 to $100 that Gans would defeat Unholz.

With the introduction of Jack Welch as referee, the presentations came to an end.

YOUNG WOMAN ADMITS THEFT IN OPEN COURT

Trusted Bookkeeper of Newton Store Tells Why She Was Driven to Steal.

RESTITUTION IS OFFERED

"Judge, I admit taking money. I took about $20 in three days. Also I took small amounts at other times. I don't know how much. I owed a doctor's bill and couldn't pay it out of my earnings. That's why I did it."

Arraigned before Judge Kennedy in the Newton Police Court to-day, Miss Emma C. Eastman, thirty-five years old, hung her head and tearfully admitted that on several occasions she took money from the cash drawer of her employers, the James S. Kennedy Company, grocers at Newton Upper Falls, for whom she had worked several years as bookkeeper.

The young woman's confession, however, was not complete. All the money that she took, according to her own admission, did not go to pay the doctor's bill. Part of it went for other purposes, she refused to say what. Pressed to tell, Miss Eastman said she would not do so in open court, but would tell the Judge privately. The Judge refused.

On arrest of Miss Eastman was a surprise to her friends. She had been trusted by her employers and was well liked by all, until various discrepancies were found on her books that led suspicion to her. Then James S. Kennedy caused her arrest. The firm cannot give an estimate as to its loss.

When Miss Eastman was arraigned this morning her brother appeared in court with her and intimated that he was unable to make restitution. The court tentatively gave the impression that restitution, in the eyes of the law, would not offset the fact that crime had been committed, but he consented to a postponement of the case for one week. Miss Eastman was being released in $100 bail.

Miss Eastman lives at No. 92 Maple street, Waltham.

FOUR MONTHS FOR ASSAULT

James Le Blanch of No. 21 Yarmouth street was to-day sentenced to four months in the House of Correction by Judge Wentworth in the Municipal Criminal Court. He was given three months on the charge of assault and battery on Officer Buell of station 4 and one month for assault and battery on his wife.

He was arrested in his home late yesterday afternoon after a struggle with Officer Buell, in which both were badly used up. The patrolman was attracted by screams from Le Blanch's wife and found her, he stated, pinned against the wall and her husband cheeking her.

'IL TROVATORE' AT MAJESTIC

The presentation at the Majestic Theatre last evening by the Knickerbocker Opera Company of the three-act operas entitled "Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," was greeted by a large audience. The company acquitted itself creditably. Miss Marie Stone, soprano Mme. Nobinl sing, Mme. Novelli sang both parts and individualized the two roles excellently, winning generous applause. Mme. Colombati and Sig. Campana were popular with the audience.

The company gave a smooth and even performance of "Pagliacci." Sig. Alessandron's Tonio was such that he thoroughly remained the popular favor he won Wednesday evening. The double bill will be repeated to-morrow evening. To-night "Il Trovatore" will be sung.

DUKE ASKS FOR WEDDING LEAVE

Special Cable to Boston American.

ROME, May 15.—The Duke of the Abruzzi, who is said to be betrothed to Miss Katherine Elkins, the American heiress, has asked the minister of the Italian navy for leave of absence that he might visit America. The request is under advisement, and there is not the slightest doubt about its being granted.

The Duke returned recently from his ship, the Regina Elena. It is said that every barrier in the way of his marriage to Miss Elkins has been removed, and the furlough desired is for the autumn, when the ceremony will be performed.

TIGERS' FIGHTING SPIRIT WINS GAME FOR THEM

The string of defeats that slammed Detroit down to the bottom of the American League during the first three weeks of this season's race was enough to take the heart out of a team. That is, out of most teams.

And it's this dashing, nervy, never-give-up-spirit that is going to let the Tigers pull themselves in the top by their own bootstraps, into a position where they can command the fear of every other club in the American League, before the sun shines on both sides of the fence in the ides of September.

Hugh Jennings said, when the club struck the basement, "Discouraged? Not a bit. Worried a little, that's all." Sunday the ralldens played the Naps to a standstill. Sunday they won a doubleheader from St. Louis. Tuesday and Wednesday trimmed Boston, and they are going to keep on climbing.

How many managers would feel as optimistic as Jennings in the face of the Detroit manager's troubles? Not many. You can count them all with a figure shaped like the hole in the old-fashioned doughnut. And right here is where the ginger has peddler has it upon his opponents. Instead of staying down when he is licked he bobs up serenely, like a cork, and end comes back for more.

There's a lesson in this. If the Tigers are not willing to be put down, why should any other team give up in the face of adversity? What's the use of throwing up both hands and quitting, just because hard luck or a few lost games are handed out?

Which is the best baseball city in the country? The odd answer to that question was given unhesitatingly as "New York," more, perhaps, than for any other reason, because of the long established notion that if baseball prospered in New York it prospered everywhere.

The best major league city is undoubtedly Boston, for at the Hub the crowds go to see ball games and not, necessarily, victories. Close up to Boston would be Philadelphia, Chicago, Pittsburg, Cleveland and St. Louis and not far behind Cleveland—if it only had a winning team—poor old Cincinnati.

Greater New York city, with its nearby neighbors of Jersey City, Newark, Hoboken and Weehawken—is easily ten times as large as Cleveland with all the Forest City environs.

No, the best baseball city is not New York, although monster crowds sometimes see the games here. It is probably not Cleveland, although that city does mighty well when it is remembered that it is the fifth town in population in the American League.

Making the question fair and asking: "Which is the best city in the country in proportion to its population?" the answer might possibly be either Toledo or Columbus, for in Toledo alone the Mud Hens played to 250,000 paid people in 1907, New York would needs draw about 3,600,000 to be equal that record.

ST. LOUIS, May 15.—The Doves and the Cardinals will meet here for the first time this season to-day.

The locals have been playing better ball so far this season than they have done for years, and the series with the Boston team should be interesting.

The Bostons failed to do as well as they expected at Cincinnati, losing three games out of four, but they hope to redeem their reputation in this present series.

"Little Cy" Young and "Bugs" Raymond will probably be the opposing pitchers to-day.

$10,000.00 WORTH OF ENDS Spring and Summer Woolens and Serges

I will give you your choice of ends, and, regardless of former price, I will make you a suit any way you want it made to your measure for $7.75.

Nine out of ten of these ends contain enough material to make a suit, and I don't pretend to make any profit, as you can see by the low price. My whole idea and object is to move the cloth.

I cannot afford to shelve any of this stock, as I do a percentage business only, so you see I must keep things moving. I figure to take a partial cash loss on each suit, but I would lose more if I didn't close the goods out.

I maintain that a well-made suit on a satisfied customer's back, even though sold at a loss, is a good ad., and less of a loss than the goods on the shelf.

When I tell you that the goods were originally bought to go into $35 and $40 suits, you can imagine what a good trade you will get if you make your selection at once.

BRODERS LEADS IN VOTES WITH CARDIO NOW SECOND

"Old Cy" Young just about holds his own these days in the BOSTON AMERICAN baseball contest for the most popular professional and amateur player, the voters are very evenly distributing their honors among the leaders.

The real battle is among the amateurs. While Broders still retains his command, yet he has a new rival to him in second position in Cardio, the Messenger Boys' candidate, the latter in one instance having received ninety-six coupons, thus forcing Broders into third place, where, in turn, he now only a very few votes in front of Curran, and Finley a close runner up.

It is now certainly up to the supporters of the leaders to get a grand hustle on and boost their favorites far enough in the lead to possibly discourage some of the closest rivals.

The coupons for the contest can be found in the baseball editions of the BOSTON AMERICAN every day. The standing of the players to date follows:

JIMMY WALSH HAS SOFT BOUT

LOS ANGELES, May 15.—Flatic fans will have an opportunity to witness an all-star program at McCarey's pavilion on the evening of May 19, when three ten round bouts and one six round curtain raiser will be served up to the patrons of the sport in Los Angeles. Two of the contests have been arranged and will form interesting exhibitions of the ring art. Jimmy Walsh will meet Eddie Mcaney at 120 pounds and Jack Gardner is matched with Howard Baker at 142 pounds at 6 o'clock. All of these boxers are well known in various parts of the country. Jimmy Walsh has made a great showing in the bantam class and in taking on Eddie Mcaney at 120 he is giving away some weight, but Eddie Keevin, who is managing the unique bout, is confident that his boy can beat the Los Angeles product.

BUDD LOOKS THE BEST OF CARPENTER'S GOOD STRING

By ED. COGSWELL.

Trainer James Carpenter is getting together a strong racing string at Readville track and expects being in the hunt when the money is paid out at the conclusion of the meeting listed during the season that he intends taking part in.

During the past week Carpenter has been laid up with an attack of rheumatism, the pesky trouble being located in his driving arm. It has never been said that the able trainer and driver was "afraid to come home in the dark," and the sight air has never before been a menace to his health, but on the occasion that Carpenter got his rheumatism he indulged in automobiling after dark, in which lays a warning to other horse trainers.

Of course, the star of the Carpenter stable is the trotting gelding Budd, 2:10¾. Last season he unfortunately got off just when the active racing was beginning, but he has wintered good and looks fine for his more strenuous training now on hand.

Ralph Wick, 2:15¼, needs no introduction to horsemen. He is in the pink of condition and should do as well this year as in the past seven seasons he has been raced, this being his eighth on the turf, during his racing career he has been first thirty-five times, second nine, third six, fourth four and unplaced in only three races.

Some of the others in the string are Magnon, 2:24¼, that has all the signs of a 2:12 trotter; Three-year-old filly by Bingen, a two-year-old by a son of Nutwood and the trotting mare Ye-Za-Ka, 2:23½.

Leslie J. Miller has a couple of youngsters that can show very fast in the stable of Eddie Burling, one is a full sister of the pacing mare Rosebuckles, 2:04½, and the other by the filly Edge, 2:23¾, out of Hattie S. Wilkes, 2:26¼.

While a lot has been said about the futurity candidates, Adula, in Jimmy O'Donnell's stable, are he has several others that may make quite a mixup with the old top notch.

There is Lady Todd, owned by John T. Morse, that last year, when three, stepped a mile in 2:21, Citation, brother of Owaissa, 2:06¾, the property of Bill Robbs, and has been a mile in 2:21, half in 1 :05; Marguerite M., of Shiloh, 2:22¾, owned by Louis Miller; Our Protein, by Our Richard, 2:13¾, out of Beth, 2:18¾, two-year-old filly by Bingen, out of Nancie, 2:17¾, and a two-year-old by Donald Hyams, one by Peter the Great and the other by Axtell.

Millard Drinkwater has quite a few that keeps him busy, but his favorite is the two-year-old trotting filly, Hazel Bingen, out of Fleur de Lis, 2:17¼, owned by J. F. Gleason of Quincy, but he is still turn many a winning trick when he faces the starting judge.

Neil Corey has in Henry Tifer's string his three-year-old filly by Mather Higgins, dam by Charley Wilkes, 2:21¾, that is showing every indication of making good. Her sire has been entered in all the big stakes down the Grand Circuit.

View, too, has Sam Hastings' three-year-old pacing filly by Bingen, out of Star Lily, 2:20¾, that can feel it off now like an aged campaigner.

EVERY Day Should Be Mother's Day for Grown Men

Every Day Is BABY'S Day for the Mother

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Well-meaning men work to organize for the annual celebration of the second Sunday in May as a national "Mother's Day." The proposition is discussed in the Senate of the United States. A national holiday in honor of the mothers is suggested.

The opinion of this newspaper is that a son or daughter who requires some one particular holiday to remind him or her of a mother is a pretty poor sample of humanity.

It is not possible to honor the mothers of the world too much. Everybody knows that the world's mothers have been shamefully neglected. There ought not to be any statue of a great man or a useful man without a statue of his mother beside it, or at least some strong and earnest public recognition in bronze or marble of the world's debt to that mother.

It would be an excellent idea if the world that is so generous in pensioning old soldiers, old policemen, old fighters and old men of many kinds, WOULD ALSO PENSION THE OLD MOTHERS. There is no more shameful sight in our so-called "civilization" than that of an old woman, the mother of workers, slaving in her old age for a mere pittance, often on her knees scrubbing. Nor is there anything more pitiful or degrading than the sight of old mothers ending their days unhappily in poorhouses and other institutions that are called "charitable," and that are really a curse in their monotony and their cold benevolence.

The mothers of the world are the creators of the world, and the world owes to them more than to any other class, more than to ALL the other classes put together.

But to pick out some ONE day for mother's day, with the wearing of some particular flower, AND THEN TO FORGET ALL ABOUT IT, WOULD AMOUNT TO VERY LITTLE.

It wouldn't do any harm, perhaps. If the Government and the people in general WANT to have their mother's day, let them have it.

What the country really NEEDS is recognition on the part of taxpayers, executives and lawmakers, OF THE DEBT THAT IS DUE AND UNPAID TO THE MOTHERS OF THE WORLD. And what the country really needs also is recognition by sons and daughters of what they owe their mothers.

How ridiculous it is to speak of one single day as mother's day, when we realize that for long years in the mother's life EVERY DAY HAS BEEN THE CHILDREN'S DAY. Think of the new-born child and the growing infant. EVERY DAY OF ITS LIFE IS FOR THE MOTHER A DAY OF ANXIETY, OF DEVOTION, OF FATIGUE AND SELF-SACRIFICE. FOR TWENTY YEARS OF HER LIFE OR MORE THE AVERAGE MOTHER DOES NOT KNOW A DAY FREE FROM ANXIETY, CLOSE ATTENTION TO THE WANTS OF CHILDREN, SACRIFICING OF HERSELF, HER TIME AND HER ENERGY. They talk about ONE MOTHER'S DAY as a reward for all that.

It should be impossible for the mother of sons and daughters to want in her old age. The law should be a hundred times more strict in compelling ungrateful children to realize the duty that they owe to their mothers. And where the children are unable to provide for the mothers adequately THE GOVERNMENT SHOULD DO THAT. How quickly the country would die out but for the devotion of the mothers. The human race would deteriorate without the constant struggle of every mother to set a good example to the son, to eliminate the inherited evil and brutality in him.

A nation that feels that it can afford each year four battleships at five millions of dollars each to kill the sons of mothers cannot afford a dollar to make the old age of the mother comfortable.

This country and other countries do not need a "mother's day" as much as they need appreciation of the fact that the mother should come first EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR, and that her claim should NEVER be neglected.

The Prince and Mme. Anna

How Lucky They Are!

Mme. Anna Gould and Prince Helie de Sagan continue to occupy the most important parts of the dramatic and sensational social stage. How they must be envied by actors and actresses!

We read in the cables one day that Mme. Anna and the Prince were seen hand in hand on the historic streets of Italian cities, singing as two happy orioles near gardens of azaleas.

Next morning the interesting wires announce that the couple had pineapple and cigarettes for breakfast. Then they walked calmly out of the dining room and hailed the first passing cab.

Again, we pick up a newspaper and the weary eye turns restlessly from paragraph to paragraph—of sporting events, Roosevelt, Bryan, the Ohio floods, the plague in Venezuela, the death farm out in Indiana, until at last—ah! and with what joy we discover that the two, happy as kids in swimming, took a shot at the roulette tables of Monte Carlo and raked in piles of money, which they stuffed in their pockets and then went out and dreamed under the stars.

We wait for another day. It comes. We turn a sheet or so, and here they are with weary feet and tiresome eyes looking for a lost bracelet of great value that the Prince, once upon a time, when Boni was busy in his peculiar way, had deftly placed in her gladsome hands.

She runs up and down hallways, in streets, with hair dishevelled, like Ophelia on her way to the river, while the Prince moans and sighs and will not be comforted.

The hours roll onward. They are to be married as soon as the Prince can become a Protestant. They were married in Hoboken. They were wedded in New Rochelle while looking at the new moon over their left shoulders. No—it was at the St. Regis Hotel, New York, just as big Bill Devery was putting out a fire on Cherry Hill.

It's too interesting a feature of this modern age to miss a single line of it, and to-morrow, and [illegible] today, and next month we will read the cable dispatches over and o[illegible]

What Will Be Will Be

Extracts From 1948 Papers

By Wex Jones

WILLIAM SMITH was fined $5,000 to-day by President Roosevelt for not having 21 children in his family. "This is a particularly flagrant case," said President Roosevelt on inflicting the punishment. "This man, in common with all other citizens, was mailed a copy of each of my messages, the postal service now being entirely devoted to my work. He is perhaps the Least Desirable Citizen out of many thousands of Little Desirables."

Failing to pay the fine, Smith will work it out in the Federal Message Print Shop.

Willie Johnson, aged ten, was spanked by President Roosevelt to-day for having shot a chewink in the ear with an air gun. President Roosevelt, as Federal Game Warden, remarked that "the noble chewink, one of the most typical of American birds, must be saved from extermination." It is reported that the President will set apart 8,000,000 acres in the Middle West as a preserve for chewinks. The inhabitants will be allowed three days in which to get outside the reservation. The Yellowstone Park will at the same time be closed to tourists for fifteen years, or until the vanishing mosquito herd has regained its former size.

The Merry Widow Limerick

It Contains No Rhyme and No Reason, but It's Largely True

There was a young man named Theodore Roosevelt,
Who didn't care a hang how Mr. Hughes felt.
Next month in Chicago
The Republicans hold their convention,
But why does the President laugh?

There once was a chap named Columbus,
Who discovered the U. S. of A.
He came over from Spain
And went back there again,
And the Queen asked him, "How is Yon Yonson?"

There was a smart woman from Ohio
Who believed in women's rights (Oh Why, oh)
She scolded every chance
Everybody who wore trousers,
But her daughter was a peach

There was once a chap named Ananias
Who was the champion heavyweight liar.
He lied, and he lied
And he lied till he died.
But he's a false alarm compared with someone we know.

The Test for Religions

Any Belief That Fails to Make People Better Here Is a Poor Fitting for "Realms Beyond"

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

MANY phases of metaphysical thought to-day have become epidemic. They need the anti-toxin of Common Sense to save the minds infected from mania.

Any philosophy or religion or creed or dogma which fails to make men better sons, husbands and fathers, better neighbors and citizens, is of little use to the world.

Any woman who is not improved as a daughter, wife, mother, neighbor and friend by her religion has not found the path that leads to the highest development of her character.

Hundreds of men and women in our midst are striving to attain powers which will enable them to reach above this everyday plane of consciousness, and to see and hear what is transpiring in psychic realms.

Insanity, divorce, broken homes and broken minds frequently result from these foolish endeavors to become "adepts."

The ranks of the adepts are not reinforced, but the ranks of the world's unfortunates are.

Test Is Here and Now

NO religion, no philosophy, no course of mental or spiritual training can fit human beings to adorn or enjoy "realms beyond," unless it fits them first to adorn and enjoy the realms in which they are placed by Destiny.

No amount of spiritual enthusiasm can render us capable of filling important positions in "kingdom come," unless it enables us to first perform every nearest duty here on earth with willing cheerfulness, courage and trust.

The Creator who placed us upon earth, in human bodies, with human instincts and appetites, intended us to live as normal human beings, performing the duties necessary to the earthly sojourn, while we develop to the best of our ability the character which merits immortality.

But this development cannot be obtained by leaping over the practical, commonplace obligations of home, neighborhood and society, and arriving at some spiritual eminence from which immortality is discernible.

It must be attained by climbing up the stairs of duties performed. Prayer and meditation "in the silence" are both means of lifting the mind above the petty worries of everyday life. They are like refreshing showers, which cleanse the mind from dust; like rays of sunshine, which bring forth blossoms on the barren earth.

Sweep First, Then Pray

BUT the woman who devotes her time to prayer and meditation and neglects to sweep her room, to prepare the meals for her family, to care for her person and make herself attractive to her husband and children, and who fails to interest herself in the things which make her companionable to those nearest her, is not developing the highest attributes of her nature.

She is not winning immortality; and she is not on the path to the highest usefulness in this world.

She is making a mistake which will prove a hindrance to her happiness on both planes of consciousness.

When any religion creates a chasm between a wife or a mother and her family and causes a separateness of interests and troubles the affections, its divine origin may be questioned.

Religion should give new vitality to the heart, increase the affections, bring those who are near to us still nearer; and make us so broad, so tolerant, so sympathetic, so loving, that all differences of faith can be borne, without discord or alienation of the affections.

What New Thought Is

NEW Thought, so called, of all religions ought to bring harmony rather than dissension into the family circle. Its whole philosophy rests upon the power of silent thought to change conditions and achieve results.

The old religions believed in proselyting, in trying to make converts, in preaching and haranguing, in revival meetings, which consisted in working upon the emotional and hysterical nature of the "unconverted."

New Thought has abandoned all these methods. The law of assertion has taken place of preaching and praying with "sinners." Thought has been declared by physical science to be a phase of the same energy which governs the solar system. It is understood how, rightly and persistently directed, thought can draw to the mind which sends it forth whatever that mind desires.

The woman who desires her family to come into harmony with her ideas should begin by making her family love and respect her in every capacity of wife, mother, sister, daughter and friend.

So practical, so thoughtful, so humanly loving, so useful, so companionable should she be in her daily life, so cheerful and so amiable in her performance of duties, that her example would, in the natural course of events, seem worthy of emulation, and her ideas and opinions worthy of respect.

Character Is Success

WHEN such a woman sends into space her quiet, earnest assertions that those who are dear to her believe as she believes, and understands as she understands, she need use no arguments, no sermons, no educating methods, to bring about the desired result.

Sooner or later she will be given her heart's wish.

But she who allows her creed to separate her from her family, who forgets to be the ideal wife, mother or daughter in trying to be the spiritual adept, only drives her family further away from the truth as she understands it, and delays her own best development by neglecting her nearest duties.

It is good wives and good mothers and good women in the daily walks of life that the world needs, not adepts or miracle workers.

Be ye faithful in a few things, and ye shall be made rulers over many.

Great powers come to those who continually perform small obligations with an understanding of their importance in the building of the Home Beautiful—the human character.
